PREFACE.

WHATEVER reason there might have been in former days to complain of the want of due respect to the memory of distinguished persons, it can hardly be said of our times, that an indifference prevails in regard to departed merit. Instead of lamenting, with the great lord BACON, that "The writing of Lives is not frequent," we could, perhaps, with more propriety, wish that the practice were either limited or better directed.

The compiler of a BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY, at least, cannot well avoid this feeling; doomed, as he necessarily is, to drudge, and often with fruitless weariness, in search of information respecting men who were truly famous in their generation; while his attention is continually diverted or perplexed with barren accounts and pompous eulogies of persons of ephemeral reputation.

Of late years, thanks to the officious zeal of friendship, and the active industry of literary undertakers, Biographical Memoirs have become as multitudinous, prolix, and veracious as epitaphs in a country church-yard. To form a proper selection from such an increasing mass of intelligence, for an alphabetical register, already abundantly copious, is by no means an easy task, particularly when so many places are required for characters of real eminence in literature, science, religion, and politics. The number of names of this description, that have been enrolled with the dead, since the last edition of this Dictionary, is so great that, without some alteration in the construction and arrangement of the collection, it would have been impossible to have compressed the old matter, with the unavoidable additions, into a single volume. To preserve the work, therefore, in the same portable form, and at the same time render it a standard of authority as a book of reference, all the articles exclusively belonging to General History, whether ancient or modern, civil or ecclesiastical, have been expunged. The reigns of sovereigns, and the revolutions of empires, demand a minuteness of detail incompatible with the contracted limits of a few pages. Besides this, the objects of historical inquiry are far more numerous and diversified than those which come under the proper denomination of Biography, since they not only include the actions and characters of individuals who have shone conspicuously in various ages of the world, but extend also to the particular events, natural as well as moral, that constitute the great body of Chronology.

To satisfy curiosity, therefore, on every fact of importance, recorded in the annals of time, would require a volume of, at least, an equal magnitude with the present.

Such a Dictionary, purely Historical and Chronological, the author has long had in contemplation; and he hopes, if health permits, speedily to carry the plan into execution, so as to render the work a fit companion, though perfectly independent in itself, of this compendium of Biography; which, through the public patronage, has now reached a fourth edition.

In strict justice to himself, however, the compiler should here observe, that the present is a new work, rather than a new edition; for, owing to causes over which he had no controul, the preceding impression was so incorrectly printed, that he found himself under the absolute necessity, not only of revising, but actually of re-writing the whole; carefully examining every authority, and taking the utmost care that no errors, in facts, names, or dates, should escape the press.* With the same sedulous attention, to render the Dictionary both accurate and complete, a supplement has been subjoined, consisting of amended and additional articles, thus bringing the biographical series up to the day of publication. As far, therefore, as fidelity and industry can ensure correctness, the author may feel satisfied in having attained it; but after all, considering the imperfection of human nature, and the frequent conflict in accounts relating to the same object, he must adopt the language of the great lexicographer, — "If sometimes the desire of accuracy has urged me to superfluities, and sometimes the fear of prolixity betrayed me to omissions; I do not despair of approbation from those who, knowing the uncertainty of conjecture, the scantiness of knowlege, the fallibility of memory, and the unsteadiness of attention, can compare the causes of error with the means of avoiding it, and the extent of art with the capacity of man."

BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY.

AA (Peter Vander), a bookseller of Leyden, where he carried on an extensive business from 1682 to his death, in 1730. He applied chiefly to the publication of geographical works, a catalogue of which appeared at Amsterdam in 1729. The principal of his compilations are — 1. A Collection of Travels in Europe, 30 vols. 12mo. 1706. 2. A Collection of Voyages in the two Indies, 8 vols. fol. 1706; and again in 29 vols. 8vo. 1707-10. 3. A Collection of Voyages in the East, by the Portuguese and other nations, 4 vols. fol. All these works are in Dutch. 4. An Atlas of two hundred Maps, fol. 5. A Gallery of the World, containing maps and topographical plates, 66 vols. folio, but commonly bound in 35. He was also the publisher of Grævius' Thesaurus, or an account of modern Italian writers; and a work on the antiquities of Sicily. — Nouv. Dict. Hist.

AA (Christian Charles Henry Vander), a Lutheran divine, was born at Zwolle in Overyssel in 1718, and died in 1795, at Haerlem, where he had been pastor fifty-one years. He had a principal share in founding the Academy of Sciences at Haerlem; and in 1778, formed another society at the same place, for the study of Œconomics. He was secretary to both institutions, and published some papers in their transactions; also sermons, which are much esteemed. — Ibid.

AAGARD (Christian), a Danish poet, was born at Wibourg in 1616. He became successively professor of poetry at Sora, and of theology at Rissen in Jutland. His works are — 1. De Homagio Fred. III. 1660, fol. 2. Threni Hyperborei, or the Death of Christian IV. He died in 1664. His brother, Nicholas Aagard, was likewise a professor at Sora, where he died at the age of 45, in 1657. His principal works are — 1. A Treatise on Subterraneous Fires. 2. Dissertation on Tacitus. 3. Observations on Ammianus Marcellinus. 4. A Dissertation on the style of the New Testament, 4to. 1655. All these pieces are in Latin. — Moreri.

AAGESEN (Suend), better known by the Latin name of SUENO, a Danish historian, flourished about the year 1186. He appears to have been secretary to the Archbishop Absalon, who directed him to compile the history of Denmark, under the title of "Compendiosa Historia Regum Daniæ." This work is held in great estimation on account of its accuracy. Sueno was also the author of another book, entitled "Historia Legum Castrensium Regis Canuti Magni, or the Laws of Canute." Both works have been frequently reprinted. — Biog. Universelle, 1811.

AARON (St.), a British martyr, who suffered with Julius during the persecution under the emperor Diocletian, in 303. There are no particulars recorded of these saints, whose festival is placed, in the Roman calendar, on the 1st of July. — Biog. Brit.

AARON, a Syrian priest and physician in the seventh century. He resided at Alexandria, where he exercised his two professions with reputation, and wrote a treatise on the small-pox and measles; together with some other medical pieces under the general title of Pandects. — Moreri.

AARON HARISCHON, commonly called the Caraite, was a Jewish rabbi and physician at Constantinople in the thirteenth century. He is known chiefly by a Commentary on the Pentateuch, printed at Jena, in folio, 1710; and a Hebrew Grammar, printed at Constantinople in 1581. There have been several Hebrew writers of the same name; as 1, Aaron Schascon, a learned rabbi and chief of the synagogue of Thessalonica, who wrote a book called the Law of Truth, printed at Venice in 1631, folio. 2. Aaron Hacharoen, the author of a treatise on Jewish customs. He was a native of Nicomedia, and flourished in the fourteenth century. 3. Aaron Ben Asser, another rabbi of the fifth century, was the author of a Hebrew Grammar, printed at Venice in 1515. To him some have ascribed the invention of the Hebrew points and accents; but with little appearance of probability. 4. Aaron Levita, of Barcelona, was the author of a rabbinical commentary on the precepts of Moses, printed at Venice in 1528. He died in 1292. 5. Aaron Ben Chaim, an African Jew of Morocco, acquired some distinction among his brethren by treatises on the Hebrew Scriptures, which were printed together at Venice, in 1609. — Moreri.

Aaron (Isaac), a learned Greek, who was interpreter to the emperor Manuel Comnenus; but having grossly misrepresented his master's meaning in order to serve the interests of the Latin princes, he fell into disgrace. and lost his eyes and estate. When Andronicus usurped the imperial throne, Isaac was taken into favour; on which occasion he avenged himself with savage cruelty upon his enemies, whom he deprived of their sight and tongues. Providence, however, did not suffer his treachery and barbarity to go unpunished; for on the accession of Isaac Angelus to the throne, in 1203, that emperor caused his tongue to be torn out, under which torture he died. — Ibid.

Aaron (Pietro), a Florentine writer upon music. He was one of the composers belonging to the chapel of Leo X., at whose death he lost his situation. His works are numerous; and the best is entitled Toscanello della Musica, printed at Venice in 1523 and in 1539. — Burney.

Aarsens (Francis), Lord of Someldyck and Spyck, and one of the ablest diplomatists of his age, was the son of Cornelius Aarsens, greffier or secretary of state to the United Provinces. The son was born at the Hague in 1572, and when young was placed under the care of Duplessis Mornay; after which he was employed by Barneveldt, as agent at the court of France, where he became ambassador, and in such favour, that Louis XIII. honoured him with the title of baron. But after residing there 15 years, he gave such offence to the French monarch, that he was recalled and employed in an embassy to Venice and other courts. In 1620 he came to England, and again in 1641, to negociate a marriage between the prince of Orange and a daughter of Charles I. Previous to this last mission he had succeeded in removing the prejudices which were conceived against him by the court of France, whither, in 1624, he went as ambassador-extraordinary. Cardinal Richelieu held him in high estimation, saying that there were but three great politicians in his time, who were Oxenstiern of Sweden, Viscardi of Montserrat, and Francis Aarsens. He died in 1641. A volume of his Negotiations has been printed; besides which, "A Journey into Spain," has been ascribed to him, which was written by his grandson. — Bayle.

Abano, see Apano.

Abaris, a personage of antiquity, concerning whom there is more of fable than truth. He is said to have been sent by the Scythians on an embassy to the Athenians, in the time of a general plague; and that while in Greece he held a disputation with Pythagoras, in the presence of Phalaris; which circumstances are contradicted by chronological facts. According to the old writers who dealt in the marvellous, Abaris was a philosopher, divinely inspired by Apollo, who gave him a golden arrow, which enabled him to perform miraculous cures, and to transport himself from place to place with the utmost celerity. These idle stories in time became a bulky history, of which the Pagans availed themselves to attack the credit of the gospel. — Bayle, Brucker, Hist. Phil.

Abas (Shah). The eighth king of Persia, of that name, was the grandson of the great Shah Abas, the friend of the English, who assisted him in the capture of Ormus, and in consequence were favoured beyond other traders to his dominions. The grandson, who died at the early age of 37, in 1666, merits record for his tolerant spirit, which he expressed by saying, when desired to enforce Islamism by compulsion, that "the Almighty alone is Lord of men's minds; and that, for his own part, instead of meddling with private opinions, he felt it his duty to minister justice impartially." — Mod. Univ. Hist.

Abassa, sister to Haroun al Raschid, who gave her in marriage to his vizier Giafar, on this strange condition,—that the union should not be consummated. Love, however, prevailed over the royal mandate; and a son was born, whom the parents conveyed secretly from Bagdad to the country; yet not with such caution as to elude the vigilance of the caliph, who not only disgraced Giafar, but afterwards put him to death, and turned the princess out of the palace, with orders that no one should give her relief. In this wretched state she went about clad in a sheep's skin, and reciting her own story in plaintive verse to excite compassion. — D'Herbelot.

Abate (Andrea), a painter of Naples, who excelled in the representation of fruit and objects of still life. His colouring is bold, and nothing can be finer than the effect which he gave to the vases and other ornaments introduced into his pictures. He was employed by the king of Spain at the Escuriel, where he had for a coadjutor Luca Giordano, who esteemed him highly on account of his amiable qualities, and his merit as an artist. He died in 1732. — Pilk.

Abauzit (Firmin), a French writer, was born at Uzes in 1679. At the age of two years he had the misfortune to lose his father; but his mother, who was of the reformed religion, attended with the greatest care to his education; and to prevent him from being brought up in the Romish faith, caused him, to be conveyed to Geneva; for which act of maternal solicitude she was confined in the castle of Somieres. On regaining her liberty at the expiration of two years, she joined her son at Geneva, where the small remains of her fortune were in a considerable degree expended upon his tuition. His progress, however, amply repaid this care; and in 1698 he visited Holland, where he obtained the friendship of the principal refugees who had been driven thither by the repeal of the edict of Nantes. From Rotterdam he crossed over to England, and being introduced to Sir Isaac Newton, that great man was so pleased with his conversation as to say, in reference to a controversy then pending, "You are a very fit person to judge between Leibnitz and me." King William wished much to retain Abauzit in this country, and made him some flattering offers to that purpose; but these were declined, and filial affection drew him back to Geneva, where, in 1726, he lost his mother, and the same year was appointed librarian to the city. In 1730 he published an improved edition of Spon's History of Geneva, with dissertations and notes. Abauzit was a man of a retiring disposition, and though somewhat inclined to Socinianism, no way ardent for the promulgation of his opinions. He was consulted by Voltaire and Rousseau, the latter of whom wrote a flattering encomium upon him as the only philosopher of his age. He died at Geneva, in 1767. The principal of his works is an Essay on the Apocalypse, in which he questions the canonical authority of that book; though it is but just to say he altered his opinion on the subject, after having sent the treatise to Dr. Twells, and received his answer.—Dict. Hist.

Abbadie (James), a French protestant divine, was born at Hay, in Berne, in 1654, according to some accounts, and in 1658, to another authority. After completing his theological studies, and taking his doctor's degree at Sedan, he went to Holland, and from thence to Berlin, where he became pastor of the French church. At the revolution he accompanied marshal Schomberg to England, and was present when that gallant general fell at the battle of the Boyne. After the victory, Abbadie returned to London, and officiated for some time at the French church in the Savoy, till his promotion to the deanery of Killaloe. He died in the parish of Mary-le-bone in 1727. Dean Abbadie was universally esteemed for the excellence of his character, and greatly admired as a preacher. He was well versed in the languages, a good scripturist, and orthodox without bigotry. His works are— 1. Sermons sur divers Textes de l'Ecriture, 8vo. 1680. 2. Panegyrique de M. l'Electeur de Brandenbourg, 4to. 1684. 3. Traité de la Verité de la Religion Chrêtienne. 8vo. This excellent work, which has gone through many editions, has been translated into English, in 2 vols. 4. Reflexions sur la Presence réele du Corps de J. C. dans l'Euchariste, 12mo. 1685. 5. Traité de le Divinitie de notre Seignieur Jesus Christ, 8vo. 1689. This also has been translated into English. 6. L'Art de se connoitre soi-meme, ou la Recherche des Sources de le Morale, 1692, 12mo. 7. Defence de la Nation Britannique, 1692, 8vo. This was an answer to a tract by Bayle on the English Revolution. 8. Panegyrique de Marie Reine d'Angleterre, 1695, 4to. 9. Histoire de la Conspiration dernière d'Angleterre, 1698, 8vo. This very scarce book was written by command of William III., and contains all the particulars of what was called the Assassination Plot. 10. La Verité de la Religion Reformée, 2 vols. 8vo. 1718. 11. Le Triomphe de la Providence et de la Religion, 4 vols. 12mo. 1723. This is a commentary on the Revelation. Besides these works, he published some single sermons, and had a concern in the French translation of the English Liturgy. — Biog. Hist.

Abbas, the uncle of Mahomet, to whose pretensions he was at first an enemy, but afterwards became his disciple, and one of his generals. He saved the life of his nephew at the battle of Honain, by recalling the fugitive Arabs; for which his memory is much revered by the mussulmans, who consider him as a saint. His son Abbas is also regarded among the ornaments of Islamism, and bears the title of Doctor of Doctors. The dynasty of caliphs called Abbassides descended from these two chiefs. — D'Herbelot.

Abbas (Hali), the same with Ali Ebnol Abbas, who is also called Magus, as being one of the followers of Zerdusht or Zoroaster. He was a Persian physician, and wrote a pompous book on medicine, called the royal work, because it was composed at the command of the son of the caliph Adado'daula, about the year 980. A Latin version of it has been printed both at Venice and Leyden. An Arabic MS. of it is in the Leyden library, in 4 folio volumes. — Friend's Hist. Phys.

Abbati (Nicolo), an Italian artist, was born at Modena in 1512. He was the scholar of Antonio Beggarelli, an eminent sculptor,

He wrote several books on theological subjects, particularly on the necessity of good works. — Gen. Biog. Dict.

Alesio (Matthew Perez d') an eminent painter and engraver, was born at Rome, and died in 1600. His most celebrated performance is the figure of St. Christopher, painted in fresco in the great church of Seville The calf of each leg is an ell in thickness, and all the other parts are in proportion. — Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Alessi (Galeas), a famous architect, was born at Perusia in 1500. Various places are adorned with buildings of his construction; but he acquired the greatest reputation by the monastery and church of the Escurial. He died in 1572. — Ibid.

Aletino (Benedetto), the fictitious name of a professor of philosophy in the Jesuits' college at Naples, who printed, in 1688, 4 vols., with a view to overthrow Cartesianism, and establish the system of Aristotle. He died in 1719. — Ibid.

Alexander the Great, was the son of Philip, king of Macedon, and born at Pella, B. C. 355, the same year in which the temple of Diana at Ephesus was destroyed, a circumstance that was considered afterwards as ominous of his character. He had great advantages in his education, being placed first under Lysimachus, and next under Aristotle. When young he discovered many evidences of his ambitious spirit. Being told that Philip had gained a great victory, he seemed dissatisfied, and said, that if "his father went on at that rate, he would leave him nothing to achieve." At another time when his father expressed his surprise that he did not engage in the Olympic games, he replied, "Give me kings to encounter, and I will enter immediately." At a very early age, he succeeded in breaking in his famous horse Bucephalus, which no one else had been able to manage. When Philip repudiated Olympias, the mother of Alexander, and took another wife, he gave a public entertainment, during which one of the courtiers, to please the king, observed, that the gods should be supplicated to give him a lawful heir. Alexander, fired at this, threw a goblet at the head of the sycophant, and exclaimed, "What! do you call me a bastard?" Philip in a rage drew his sword and rushed towards Alexander, but being in liquor, fell on the floor; on which the youth sarcastically said, "See what a general you have got, who cannot take a step without falling!" The king was then about to march against Persia, but was assassinated soon after, on which Alexander ascended the throne, and though some of the states endeavoured to shake off the Macedonian yoke, the young hero soon quelled the design, and was acknowledged general of Greece. He then marched into Thrace, and gained several conquests. During his absence, Thebes revolted; on the intelligence of which Alexander returned, took that city by storm, and made a dreadful carnage of the inhabitants. He also destroyed all the buildings, except the residence of Pindar the poet. This severe example had its effect on the other states, and even Athens, which was the most impatient under the domination of Macedon, distinguished itself by a servile submission to the conqueror. He next turned his arms against Darius king of Persia, and in his 22d year crossed the Hellespont, at the head of 40,000 men. With this force he defeated the Persians at the Granicus, after which he made himself master of numerous places. At Gordium, where he assembled his army, he is said to have cut the famous knot on which the fate of Asia was said to depend. Shortly after this he defeated Darius near Issus, took a quantity of treasure and many prisoners, among whom were the mother, wife, and children of the king of Persia. This victory was followed by the conquest of Phœnicia, Damascus, and other places. While in Cilicia he fell into a dangerous fever, owing to his imprudently bathing when hot in the river Cydnus. In this state he received a letter from Parmenio, intimating his suspicions that his physician Philip had been bribed to poison him. While Alexander was reading the contents, the physician came in with a potion, which the king took, drank it off, and gave Philip the letter to peruse. The siege of Tyre took him seven months, and in revenge he committed horrible cruelties on the inhabitants. He next marched to Jerusalem, where he was met by the high-priest dressed in his sacerdotal vestments, who presented to the monarch the prophecy of Daniel, in which it was foretold that a Grecian prince should destroy the Persian empire: for which Alexander bestowed liberal presents on the Jews, and passed into Egypt, which country he subdued. While there he founded the city of Alexandria, and consulted the oracle of Jupiter Ammon, whose priest flattered him, by asserting that he was the son of that deity. Darius now collected another army, and was defeated at Arbela, which decided the fate of western Asia; but when that unfortunate prince was soon after treacherously slain by Bessus, the conqueror lamented his death, and caused the murderer to be executed. This battle was followed by the capture of Susa and Persepolis, the last of which cities Alexander destroyed at the instigation of his mistress. He now prepared for an expedition to India, and when a philosopher would have restrained his ambition, by telling him there were other worlds beyond the present, he only expressed his concern that he could not subdue them. After a perilous march, Alexander reached the Indus about the year 327 B. C., and crossed that river at the part where the city of Attock now stands. Here Ambisares, a mountain-chief, with some others of the native princes, made their submission to him, but Porus, with a formidable army, in which were numerous elephants, made a determined stand against the invader. The fortune of Alexander, however, prevailed, and the Indian king was made prisoner, but so pleased was the victor with his spirit, that he restored him to his dominions, and thus converted him from an enemy into a friend. Fired with success, the conqueror entered the fertile plains now called the Panjab, or the country of the five rivers, directing his course to the Ganges, from which object, however, he was diverted by the rainy seasons, the resistance of the native tribes, and the disaffection of his own troops. After taking the city of Sangala, he crossed the Hyphasis, now the Beyah, which falls into the Sutlege, and there erected altars, which remains are said to be still in existence. Here terminated his progress in India, owing to the refractory conduct of his soldiers, who were dispirited by the hardships which they had endured, and appalled by the report of greater dangers to be encountered. Alexander, therefore, retraced his steps to the Hydaspes, on the banks of which he built two cities, named Nicæa and Bucephala. Here also he constructed a fleet, in which he embarked, and proceeded down the river, leaving the army to march by land. Near the conflux of the Hydaspes with the Hydraotes, Alexander had a severe contest with the Malli, in which he was wounded, and his whole army nearly lost. On his recovery, he proceeded in a vessel down the river to Patala, where the fleet and the army were collected. Here he left the former under the command of Nearchus, and hastened by land to Susa, having been in the field two rainy seasons. On his return to Babylon, which he improved considerably, Alexander fell into habits of intemperance, and died of a fever contracted by excessive drinking, in his thirty-third year, B.C. 323. His body pursuant to his own direction, was conveyed to Alexandria, and there deposited, by Ptolemy Lagus, in a coffin of gold, enclosed in a sumptuous sarcophagus, which is now said to be in the British museum. He left one son by Roxana, who, with his mother, was murdered by Cassander. —— The character of Alexander was made up of very great and very bad qualities. He committed many cruelties; and, in one of his drunken fits, stabbed his friend Clytus: yet he often performed deeds that indicated a benevolent mind; and though he was pleased with the ascription of divinity, on other occasions he expressed his abhorrence of adulation. He had a taste for learning, and had always about him men of science, philosophers, and poets. — Plutarch. Curtius. Arrian.

Alexander Severus, a Roman emperor, was a Phœnician. His father, Genesius Marcianus, had been consul, and his mother, though related to Heliogabalus, was distinguished by the purity of her manners, and is supposed to have been favourable to Christianity. From such a parent Alexander could not but derive good instructions, and accordingly his virtue excited the hatred of Heliogabalus, who attempted his life; which so enraged the Prætorian guards that they put the emperor to death, and raised Alexander to the throne. Not long afterwards he was engaged in a war with the Persians, over whom he gained a great victory in person, and on his return was honoured with a triumph. He next marched against the Germans, who had invaded Gaul, but while there, a sedition broke out in his army, headed by Maximin; in which mutiny the emperor and his mother were murdered, A. D. 235. Alexander was a great encourager of literature; and so friendly to the Christians, as to have the image of our Lord in his private chapel. — Univ. Hist. Gibbon.

Alexander, bishop of Hierapolis in the 5th century. He espoused the doctrine of Nestorius, that there were two different natures in Christ, for which he was deprived, and banished by the council of Ephesus. — Cave.

Alexander VI. (pope), was born at Valencia, in Spain, 143[illegible]. His original name was Roderic Borgia, and his mother was sister to Calixtus III., by whom he was made cardinal in 145[illegible]. On the death of Innocent VIII. he co[illegible]ed by his intrigues in the conclave, t[illegible] get himself elected pope, though he [illegible] the most [illegible] and daughter by a [illegible] Borgia, was [illegible] himself; and [illegible] which these [illegible] At length [illegible] the same mean[illegible] for the ruin of [illegible] and his son, attempting [illegible] cardinal on accou[illegible] mistake drank the wine which th[illegible] destined for their victim. Alexander died almost directly, but Borgia recovered, and was killed some years after. — Gordon's Life of Alexander VI.

Alexander VII. (pope). His original name was Fabio Chigi, and he was born at Sienna, in 1599. After passing through a variety of offices with credit, he became a bishop and cardinal. On the death of Innocent X. in 1655, he was elected pope, owing to his affectation of extraordinary piety and humility. He published, in 1656, a famous bull against the Jansenists; yet, it is said, he was a liberal-minded prelate, and particularly favourable to the protestants. He was an eminent scholar, and an encourager of learning. He died in 1667.—Moreri.

Alexander (Polyhistor), an historian, who lived about 80 B. C. He was the slave of Cornelius Lentulus, who entrusted him with the education of his children, and then gave him his freedom. He was burnt to death in his house at Laurentum, which so affected his wife that she committed suicide. He wrote five books concerning Rome; and various other works in history and philosophy, which are all lost. — Vossius de Hist. Græc.

Alexander of Ægea, a peripatetic philosopher, was the tutor of Nero, whom he is said to have corrupted by his instructions. He wrote a commentary on Aristotle's Meteorology. — Suidas.

Alexander (Aphrodisæus), a peripatetic philosopher in the 2d century. He was called the Commentator, on account of his explications of Aristotle's works. His book "De Fato" was printed at London in 1688, and his Commentaries on Aristotle were printed by Aldus, at Venice. — Vossius de Philos.

Alexander, bishop of Alexandria, was exemplary in his life, and apostolical in his doctrine. He opposed Arius, who was a priest of his church, and condemned his errors in a council. He was also at the council of Nice on the same occasion; and died in 326. — Cave.

Alexander, an abbot in Sicily, who wrote the life and reign of Roger, king of that island, which was printed at Saragossa, in 1578. He lived in the 12th century. — Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Alexander (Trallianus), a philosopher and physician of the fifth century, was born at Tralles, in Asia Minor. After travelling through many countries he settled at Rome, where he gained great reputation. He excelled in Therapeutics, and is considered with Archigenes as the best of the Greek physicians after Hippocrates. His works were printed at Paris in 1548, and at Lausanne, in 1772, by Haller, 2 vols. 8vo. — Friend's Hist. Phys.

Alexander, bishop of Jerusalem in the third century, celebrated for his piety and learning. He studied under Pantænus, and Clement of Alexandria. Being made bishop of Cappadocia, he was imprisoned in the persecution begun by Severus, and remained in confinement near eight years. On his release he was associated in the government of Jerusalem with Narcissus, at whose death he became sole bishop; but in the reign of Decius he was again imprisoned, and died of ill usage in 251. Fragments of his letters are preserved in Eusebius. — Dupin. Cave.

Alexander of Lycopolis, in Egypt, who was a zealous writer against the Manichean system. It is undecided whether he was a christian or a pagan. His work was published at Paris in 1672, folio. — Fabricius. Tillemont.

Alexander, a Norman by birth, was made bishop of Lincoln in 1123. He restored his cathedral, which had been burnt by accident, enlarged its revenues, erected the castles of Banbury, Sleaford, and Newark, and founded two monasteries. He died in 1147. — Godwin de Præsul. Biog. Brit.

Alexander de St. Elpide, archbishop of Amalfi; he wrote a book in vindication of the papal over the imperial authority, which was printed in 1624. He lived in the 14th century. — Moreri.

Alexander of Paris, a French poet in the 12th century. He wrote a poem on the life of Alexander the Great, in verses of twelve syllables, which measure has ever since been called Alexandrine. — Ibid.

Alexander, an abbot, who was sent by Henry III. to support the rights of the English nation at the court of Rome, which commisson he discharged with such fidelity, that Pandulphus, the pope's legate in England, excommunicated him, and caused him to be imprisoned; he died about 1217. His works are, Victoria a Proteo; de Ecclesiæ Potestate; de Potestate Vicaria; de Cessatione Papali, &c. — Bale.

Alexander ab Alexandro, an eminent lawyer, was born at Naples in 1461. He renounced his profession, owing to the corrupt state in which the practice of it was at that time. He wrote a curious book, entitled "Genialium Dierum," in the manner of Aulus Gellius's Attic Nights. It was printed in folio at Rome, in 1522, and there the author died the year following. He also wrote a book entitled "Alexandri J. C. Napolitani Dissertationes quatuor de rebus admirandis." — Vossius. Bayle.

Alexander (John), a dissenting minister, was born in Ireland in 1736. He received his education at Daventry, after which he became pastor of a congregation at Longdon, near Birmingham, where he died suddenly in 1765. After his death was printed a work by him, entitled "A Paraphrase on the 15th of the 1st Ep. to the Corinthians, with Remarks on the 6th, 7th, and 8th chapters of the Romans," and a sermon; 4to. He also wrote some papers in a work called the "Library." His brother, Dr. Benjamin Alexander, a physician, who died in 1768, translated a work of Morgagni's into English. — Biog. Brit.

Alexander (Noel), called in Latin Natalis, was born at Rouen, in Normandy, in 1639. He entered into the order of the Dominicans, and became a doctor of the Sorbonne. Besides a vindication of Thomas Aquinas; a commentary on the Gospels; another on the Epistles; and some expository works on the prophets, he wrote a treatise on the conformity between the Chinese ceremonies and the Greek and Roman idolatry; but his greatest work is a church history, in 26 vols. 8vo. in Latin, and the history of the Old Testament, in 6 vols. 8vo. At the close of his life he lost his sight, and died in 1724. — Moreri.

ALEXANDER (Nicholas), a Benedictine, was born in 1654 at Paris, and died in 1728. He practised physic, and gave his fees to charitable uses. He published, 1. Physic and Surgery for the Poor, Paris, 1738, 12mo. 2. A Botanical and Pharmaceutical Dictionary, 8vo. — Dict. Hist.

ALEXANDER (Nevskoi), grand duke of Russia, and a saint of that church, was born in 1218. His father, Yaroslaf, in 1227, removed his residence from Novgorod to Peryaslaf, leaving at the former place his two sons, Feodor and Alexander, as his representatives. Five years after, Feodor died, and Alexander became viceroy. About 1239 he married a princess of Polotzk, and began to strengthen his kingdom against the incursions of his neighbours, who drew to their interest Valdemar II. king of Denmark, with the Swedes and Teutonic knights. Notwithstanding this combination, Alexander proceeded to engage the enemy, whom he defeated on the banks of the Neva. After his death, he was canonized; and Peter the Great erected a monastery on the spot where he gained his fame. The Empress Catherine added to this foundation a superb church, with a magnificent mausoleum for herself and descendants. The shrine of the saint is of massy silver. Peter the Great instituted an order of knighthood in honour of his memory. — Coxe's Travels.

ALEXANDER (Sir William), a Scotch poet, was born in 1580. He published his poem entitled Aurora, in 1604; and in 1607, a collection of tragedies, in 4to. In 1613, he became gentleman-usher to prince Charles, and received the honour of knighthood. In 1621, James I. gave him a grant of Nova Scotia, which he intended to colonise; and Charles I. patronised the scheme by appointing him lieutenant of that country, and founding an order of knights-baronet in Scotland, each member of which was to contribute towards the settlement. In 1630, he was created viscount Canada, and afterwards earl of Stirling. He died in 1640. His poetical works make one volume folio. — Biog. Brit.

ALEXANDER (William), an ingenious artist, was the eldest son of a coachmaker at Maidstone, and born there in 1768. He received a good education in his native town, but at the age of fifteen came to London to study the fine arts, in which he attained such excellence as to be chosen to accompany lord Macartney in his embassy to China. On his return, many of his drawings were selected to illustrate sir George Staunton's account of that voyage; and Mr. Alexander himself published a splendid work on the "Costume of China," which was so well received as to encourage the author to bring out another part. On the formation of the royal military college at Marlow, Mr. Alexander was appointed drawing-master, which office he resigned on being chosen one of the keepers of antiquities in the British Museum, where he died in 1816, after having executed the drawings of the ancient marbles and terra cottas in that great national collection, and which have been published by Mr. Taylor Combe, in 3 vols. 4to. — Gent. Mag.

ALEXANDRINI DE NEUSTAIN (Julius), a native of Trent, was physician to Maximilian II., who conferred several honours on him. He died in 1590, aged 85. He wrote "Salubrium, sive de Sanitate tuenda;" "De Medicina et Medico;" "Pædotrophia;" 8vo. "Methodus Medendi," 8vo. &c. — Moreri.

ALEXIS, a Greek comic poet, and uncle to Menander, lived about 363 years before Christ. A few fragments of his works are extant. — Vos. de Poet. Græc.

ALEXIS of Piedmont, the author of "Medical Secrets," printed at Basil in 1536, and translated into Latin, French, and English. He was of a noble family, and travelled fifty-seven years; but at the age of eighty-two, seeing a poor man expire at Milan, through the unskilfulness of the surgeon, he was so struck with remorse, for not interfering to save his life, that he became a hermit. When he died is unknown. — Moreri.

ALEXIS (William), a Benedictine monk of Lyra, and afterwards prior of Bussi au Perche at the beginning of the fifteenth century. His works are — 1. Four Quinquagenaires, presented at the Parliament of Rouen, 4to. 2. Les Regrets de l'Homme et de la Femme, 4to. 3. Le grand Blason des fausses Amours, Paris, 1493. — Biog. Univ.

ALEYN (Charles), an English poet, was educated at Sidney college, Cambridge, and became usher to Edward Sherburne, esq. and died in 1640. He wrote two poems, the battles of Cressy and Poictiers, and other pieces. — Biog. Brit.

ALFARABI, a celebrated Arabian philosopher of the 10th century, was born at Farab, in Asia Minor, from which place he took his name, though his real one was Mohammed. He studied at Bagdad, and afterwards travelled through many countries for improvement. At Damascus the Prince was so pleased with his conversation and skill in music, that he gave him a handsome pension. Alfarabi died there in 950. He wrote several treatises on the Aristotelian philosophy, and many of his works were translated by the eastern Jews into Hebrew. His work De Intelligentiis, was published with Avicenna, at Venice, in 1495: another, "De Causis," with Aristotle; and his "Opuscula Varia," at Paris, in 1638. — Gen. Hist. Dict.

ALFARO Y GAMON (Juan de), a Spanish

painter, was born at Cordova, in 1640. He studied under Castillo and Velasquez, whose stile he imitated, particularly in portraits. Many of his pictures, however, are much in the manner of Vandyke. He died in his 40th year, of grief, occasioned by the banishment of his patron, the admiral of Castile, in whose family he resided. — Cumberland's Span. Painters.

ALFENUS VARUS (Publius), a native of Cremona, who became an advocate, and at length consul of Rome. He wrote forty books of digests, and some collections cited by Aulus Gellius. Horace mentions him, and Virgil speaks of his conduct with gratitude. — Fabricius, Bibl. Lat.

ALFES (Isaac), a Jewish rabbi, was born near Fez, in 1013, and died at Lucena, in 1103. His principal work is an abridgment of the Talmud, which is held in high esteem by the Jews. It was printed at Constantinople in 1509, and at Venice in 1552. — Gen. Dict.

ALFIERI (Vittorio), an Italian poet, was born in 1749, of an ancient family at Asti, in Piedmont, and educated at Turin. His progress in learning, however, gave but little promise of future eminence, and he left the academy at the age of sixteen, almost as ignorant as when he entered it. After this he became passionately fond of riding, and next he indulged a humour for travelling, but though he visited many countries, he took no pains to acquire the language of any of them. He was twice in England, where he became distinguished only by affairs of gallantry, and after remaining in London, the [illegible] months, he returned to Turin, where love inspired him with a [illegible] for poetry. In 177[illegible] he produced at the theatre of that city a tragedy, called "Cleopatra," and a [illegible]nce, entitled "The Poet," the latter being a burlesque of the former. The pieces [illegible]wever, were so successful, that Alfieri this time resolved to make literature [illegible]ief pursuit. He accordingly applied diligence to the study of Latin, Italian, French, in which he made a great [illegible]y. Within less than seven years [illegible]ced fourteen dramas, besides [illegible] other works in prose and verse, among which were a version of Sallust, and a treatise on tyranny. He afterwards renewed his travels, and visited Paris with his lady, who was the princess of Schomberg, widow of Charles Edward, the last prince of the house of Stuart. This was at the period when the Revolution was raging with all its horrors, in consequence of which Alfieri quitted France in haste, leaving behind him considerable property, the whole of which was sequestered and sold. From this time he always entertained the utmost abhorrence for the French people. At the age of 48 he began to study Greek, and succeeded so far as to translate some works from that language. His incessant labours at length undermined his constitution, and he died at Florence in 1803. His remains w e interred in the church of St. Croix, where his widow erected a monument to his memory, which was executed by Canova. He wrote his own life, which has been printed in 2 vols. and his posthumous works were published at Florence, with London in the title page, in 13 vols. 1804. — Gen. Biog. Dict.

ALFORD (Michael), an English jesuit, whose real name is said to have been Griffith, was born in London in 1587. After completing his studies at Rome, he was sent by his society as a missionary to England, where he resided above thirty years. He died at St. Omer's in 1652; leaving behind him two works; one entitled "Britannia Illustrata," and the other, "Annales Ecclesiastici Britannorum." — Moreri.

ALFRAGAN, an Arabian astronomer, who lived about the year 800. He was a native of Fergan, in Sogdiana, now called Samarcand, from whence he took his name, but the true one appears to have been Ahmed Ben Cothair. He wrote the elements of astronomy, printed by Golius, at Amsterdam in 1669. — Hutton.

ALFRED THE GREAT, the youngest son of Ethelwolf, king of the West Saxons, was born at Wantage, in Berkshire, in 849. At the age of five years he was sent to Rome, where the pope anointed him with the royal unction. Ethelwolf died in 858, leaving his dominions to Ethelbald and Ethelbert, and his personal estate to his younger sons Ethelred and Alfred. Ethelbald did not long survive his father, and was succeeded by Ethelbert; but he dying in 866, left the throne to Ethelred, who made Alfred his prime-minister and general of his armies. In 871, the Danes under Hinguar and Hubba, having invaded England, marched to Reading, which they took, together with the castle. Ethelred and his brother came before the place about a week afterwards, and a battle ensued, in which the enemy was defeated; but Ethelred received a wound, of which he died. Thus Alfred, at the age of 22, was in possession of a crown for which he was obliged to fight. He engaged the Danes at Wilton, but, after a hard conflict, was forced to retreat, and conclude a treaty on disadvantageous terms, with a foe who was not to be bound by any contract. The Danes soon violated their engagement, but their fleet being defeated by the ships of Alfred, they in turn sued for peace, and gave hostages for their fidelity. However, when reinforcements arrived, they renewed hostilities with such success, that in 877, the king, being abandoned by his army, was under the necessity of laying aside the ensigns of royalty, and concealing himself in the cottage of one of his herdsmen. One day as he sat by the fire trimming his bow and arrows, his hostess left in his care some cakes, which were placed on the hearth to be baked. Alfred, however, was so intent upon his employment as to suffer the cakes to be burned; and when the woman returned, she scolded him heartily, saying, "he could eat the cakes fast enough, though he would not take the trouble of looking after them." He afterwards retired to the isle of Athelney in Somersetshire, with a few followers, and there received information that Odun, earl of Devon, had obtained a great victory over the Danes, in Devonshire, and taken their magical standard. On this the king disguised himself as a harper, and entered the Danish camp, where his skill was so much admired that he remained a considerable time, and was admitted to play before the chiefs. Having thus gained a knowledge of the state of the enemy, he directed his nobles to meet him at Selwood, in Wiltshire, with their vassals, which was done so secretly, that the Danes were surprised at Eddington, and completely defeated. Alfred behaved with great liberality on this occasion, giving up the kingdom of the East Angles to such of the Danes as would embrace the Christian religion. He now put his kingdom into a state of defence, increased his navy, and having recovered London, brought it into a flourishing state. After a rest of some years, an immense number of Danish forces landed in Kent, on which those who were settled in Northumberland fitted out two fleets, and sailing round the coast, committed great ravages. They were, however, soon defeated by Alfred, who caused several of the pirates to be executed at Winchester. Thus he secured the peace of his dominions, and struck terror into his enemies, after fifty-six battles by land and sea, in all of which he was personally engaged. But what makes him most an object of admiration, is his character as the reformer of laws, and promoter of learning. He composed a body of statutes, instituted the trial by jury, and divided the kingdom into shires and tithings. He was so exact in his government that robbery was unheard of, and valuable goods might be left on the high road. He also held a national council twice a year at London. The state of learning in his time was so low, that from the Thames to the Humber hardly a man could be found who understood Latin. To remedy this evil, he invited scholars from all parts, and endowed seminaries throughout his kingdom; and if he was not the founder of the university of Oxford, certain it is, he raised it to a reputation which it had never before enjoyed. He composed several works, and translated others from the Latin, particularly Orosius's History of the Pagans, and Boethius's Consolations of Philosophy. He divided the twenty-four hours into three equal parts, one devoted to the service of God, another to public affairs, and the third to refreshment. To Alfred, also, England is indebted for the foundation of her naval establishment, and he was the first who sent out ships to make the discovery of a north-east passage. In private life he was benevolent, pious, cheerful, and affable; and his person was amiable, dignified, and engaging. He died October 28. 900, though some writers place his death in the following year, and was succeeded by Edward, his second son, commonly called Edward the Elder. — Biog. Brit.

ALFRED, an English prelate in the 10th century, was a benedictine in the abbey of Malmesbury, of which he became abbot, and afterwards bishop of Exeter. He wrote — 1. De Naturis Rerum. 2. The Life of Adelmus. 3. The History of the Abbey of Malmesbury. — Pits.

ALFRED, surnamed the Philosopher, an Englishman of the 13th century, who was greatly esteemed at Rome, where he served the cardinal Ottoboni, whom he attended to England on his being appointed legate. He died about 1270. He left five books on the Consolations of Boethius, four upon the Meteors of Aristotle, and one upon vegetables. — Leland. Bale. Pits.

ALGARDI (Alexander), an architect, and sculptor of Bologna. He studied under Lewis Carrachi, and died at Rome in 1654. There is in the church of St. Peter of the Vatican a fine bas-relief by him, representing St. Leo appearing before Attila; and at Bologna, a group of the beheading of St. Paul. — Moreri.

ALGAROTTI (Francis), an eminent writer, was born at Venice in 1712. He received a liberal education, and in 1739 visited Paris, where he composed his Newtonianism for the Ladies. After making a long stay in France he came to England, and then went to Germany. Frederic, king of Prussia, made him a chevalier of the order of merit, created him a count, and appointed him his chamberlain. The king of Poland, also highly esteemed him, and gave him the title of privy counsellor for the affairs of war. He died at Pisa in 1764. His works were published at Leghorn, 1765, in [illegible] vols. 8vo, and afterwards translated into [illegible]h, in 8 vols. 8vo. — Dict. Hist.

ALGAZELI (Abou-Hamed-Mohammed), an Arabian Philosopher, was born at Thous, in 1058, and died in solitude in 1111. He wrote a treatise on "Religious Sciences," which has been translated into Latin and Hebrew. Another of his works, entitled "Philosophica et Logica Algazeli," was printed at Cologne, in 1506. — D'Herbelot.

ALGER, an ecclesiastic of Liege, in the 12th century. In 1121 he shut himself up at Cluni, and passed his days in the most rigid seclusion. He died in 1131. He wrote some books on theology, by one of which Erasmus professed to be confirmed in the doctrine of the real presence in the eucharist. — Moreri.

Alginzi-Galeazzo, an architect of the 16th century, was born at Carpi, in Modena. He was employed by the duke of Ferrara, chiefly, in fortification. His work "Delle Fortificazioni," was printed at Venice in 1570. — Dict. Hist.

Alghizi (Thomas), a lithotomist of Florence, was born in 1669, and died by the bursting of a fowling piece, in 1713. He published "Lithotomia overo del cavar la Pietra;" 1707, fol. — Ibid.

Alhazen, an Arabian mathematician, was a native of Bussorah. He wrote upon astrology, but his great work is a treatise on optics, printed in Latin, at Basil, in 1572. He was the first who showed the importance of refractions in astronomy; but having imprudently asserted that he could prevent the inundations of the Nile, and dreading the vengeance of the caliph, should he be taken at his word, he counterfeited madness. He died at Cairo in 1038. — Hutton.

He understood English, and translated the catechism of the church of England, and all the Bible, into the Turkish language. His greatest work is a book on the Liturgy of the Turks, their pilgrimages to Mecca, &c. translated into Latin by Dr. Smith. He died in 1675. — Bayle.

Ali Bey, an adventurer, was born in Natolia in 1728. He was the son of a Greek priest, but falling when a child into the hands of robbers, they carried him to Cairo, and sold him to Ibrahim, lieutenant of the Janisaries; who caused him to be circumcised, clothed him in the dress of the Mamelukes, and gave him the name of Ali. At the age of 22, he was appointed cachef, or governor of the household, in which station he behaved so well that when Ibrahim was elected emir al hagi, he procured Ali the rank of sangiak, or member of the council. In 1758, the emir being murdered by Ibrahim, the Circassian, Ali meditated vengeance, but could not effect his purpose till 1763, when, having arrived at the post of scheik el balad, he slew Ibrahim with his own hand. This action raised him numerous enemies, so that he was obliged to fly to Jerusalem, and from thence to Acre, where he was protected by the scheik Daher. In 1766 he was recalled by the people, and, being placed at the head of the government, Egypt began to recover its former splendour. In 1768 war broke out between the Turks and the Russians, on which Ali sent 12,000 men to serve in the Ottoman army, but his enemies having reported that these troops were designed to assist the Russians, a capigi, and four soldiers, were sent to take off his head. Ali being informed of this seized the messengers, and put them to death. The Egyptians then declared war against the Porte, and obtained several victories; but at last the principal commanders revolted with their troops, and in a battle which took place between Ali and the malcontents, he was taken prisoner, and died of his wounds in 1773. — Volney's Travels in Egypt.

Aliamet (James), a French engraver, and member of the academy of painting, was born at Abbeville, in 1728, and died at Paris in 1788. Among his best works are some which represent battles between the Chinese and Tartars. His brother, Francis Germain Aliamet, came to England, and executed several plates for Alderman Boydell. — Dict. Hist.

Alimentus (Cincius), a Roman historian, flourished about 150 years B. C. He wrote the history of Hannibal, and of Gorgias of Leontium, but none of his writings are extant. — Vossius.

Aliprandi (Bonamente), an Italian writer. He was brought up under Louis de Gonzaga, after which he embraced a military life, and in his latter years obtained diplomatic employment. He died in 1417. A metrical chronicle by him was published by Muratori, in his "Antiquitates Italiæ mediæ ævi." — Moreri.

Alix (Peter), a French writer, was born at Dole in 1600, and died in 1676. He was abbe of St. Paul, at Besançon, and afterwards canon of that church, the rights of which he ably defended against the papal claims, but his works are very scarce. — Gen. Biog. Dict.

Alkemade (Cornelius Van), a Dutch antiquary, was born in 1654, and died in 1737. He published a dissertation on tournaments, a series of coins, a treatise on burial ceremonies, and another on the ancient manners of the Hollanders. — Ibid.

Alkmaar (Henry d'), a German poet of the 15th century. He wrote a satire called the Fable of Reynard, which has been translated into several languages. It is, however, supposed that Alkmaar is only a fictitious name assumed by Nicholas Bauman, a Frieslander, who died in 1503. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Allainval (Leonor Soulas d'), a French abbe and poet, was born at Chartres: he wrote several comedies, and some operas, which were well received. He died in the Hotel Dieu, at Paris, in 1753. — Ibid.

Allais (Denys Vairasse d'), a French writer, was born at Allais, in Languedoc. In 1665 he served in the English navy under the duke of York, and on his return to France taught the English language. He wrote a French and English grammar, and a political romance, entitled "The History of the Severambians," printed first in 1677, 2 vols. 12mo.; the last was translated into English in 1 vol. 8vo. — Ibid.

Allam (Andrew), an English divine, was born at Garsington, in Oxfordshire, in 1655. He was educated at Edmund-hall, of which he became vice-principal, and died in 1685. He published a translation of the life of Ipiicrates, in 8vo., and assisted Wood in compiling his Athenæ Oxonienses. — Biog. Brit.

Allan (David), a Scotch painter, was born at Edinburgh, and received his instructions in the academy instituted for the encouragement of the arts, by the printers Foulis of Glasgow. He then went to Italy, and at Rome gained a prize for the best specimen of historical composition. In 1777 he returned home, and after residing a few years in London, went to settle at Edinburgh, as master of the academy established there for the purpose of diffusing a knowledge of the fine arts, and applying them to manufactures. He died in 1796. There are several engravings from his pictures, and in some he has introduced portraits of his acquaintance. — Gen. Biog. Dict.

Allan (George), an English antiquary, was a native of Darlington, where he became eminent as an attorney. His leisure hours were devoted to literature, and he had a printing press in his house, from which he struck off limited copies of many curious tracts, as "The Letter of Cromwell on the founding of a College at Durham;" "The Life of Bishop Trevor;" "The Life of St. Cuthbert;" "Collections relating to Sherborn Hospital," &c. He also engraved several charters in fac simile, with the seals of bishops. His library was large, and he contributed liberally to the literary undertakings of persons engaged in similar studies; particularly to Mr. Hutchinson, in his History of Durham. Mr. Allan presented to the Society of Antiquaries, of which he was a member, 26 volumes of MSS. relating to the University of Oxford. He died in 1800. — Nichols's Life of Bowyer.

Allard (Guy), a French writer, who is principally known by numerous works upon the genealogical history of Dauphiny; he is also the author of a romance, entitled "The amorous History of Prince Zizime." He died in 1716. — Moreri.

Allatius (Leo), a learned writer, was born in the isle of Chios, in 1586. At nine years of age he was removed to Calabria, and from thence to Rome, where he was admitted a student of the Greek college. On completing his education he was chosen grand vicar to the bishop of Anglona in Naples; but soon returned to Rome, and applied to the study of physic, in which he took a degree. Afterwards he made the belles lettres his pursuit, which he taught in the college where he had been educated. Pope Alexander VII. appointed him keeper of the Vatican library, and one day the same pontiff asked him, "why he did not enter into orders?" "because," replied Allatius, "I would be at liberty to marry." "Well then," replied his holiness, "why don't you marry?" "because," answered he, "I would be free to take orders." His remains were interred in the church of St. Thomas the Apostle, London, in 1559. He translated into English, the work of Alexander Hales, "De authoritate verbi Dei," 12mo., and Melancthon's "Treatise on the Sacrament." He was also the author of "A Christian Introduction for Youth, 8vo. — Masters's Hist. of Corpus Christi college.

Allen (John), archbishop of Dublin, was educated at Oxford and Cambridge. Archbishop Warham sent him on a commission to Rome, where he continued nine years. On his return he was appointed chaplain to Wolsey, and was judge of his court, in which office he committed many dishonest acts. In 1528 he was made archbishop of Dublin, and chancellor of Ireland. He was cruelly murdered by Thomas Fitzgerald, son of the earl of Kildare, in 1534. — Biog. Br.

Allen (Thomas), a divine, was born in 1573, and educated in the school of Worcester, from whence he went to Brazen-nose college, Oxford. He was afterwards of Merton-college, Oxford, and by the interest of Sir Henry Saville, obtained a fellowship in Eton-college. He was a laborious scholar, and wrote "Observationes in libellum Chrysostomi in Esaiam." He died in 1638. — Biog. Br.

Allen (Thomas), a mathematician, was born at Uttoxeter, in Staffordshire, in 1542. He was of Trinity-college, Oxford, and took his degree of M. A. in 1567. In 1570 he removed to Gloucester-hall, where he devoted himself to the study of the mathematics, and refused a bishopric, which was offered him by the Earl of Leicester, who consulted him in affairs of the greatest importance. He published in Latin the second and third books of Ptolemy, "On the Judgment of the Stars," with an exposition. — He died in 1632. — Wood, A. O.

Allen, (Thomas), another divine, was born about 1682, and educated at Wadham college, Oxford. In 1714 he was presented to the rectory of Kettering, in Northamptonshire, where he died while reading prayers in the church, 1755. He published "The Practice of a Holy Life," 8vo.; and "The Christian's Sure Guide," 8vo. &c. — Gent. Mag.

Allen (Thomas), a nonconformist, was born at Norwich, in 1608, and educated at Caius-college, Cambridge. After being for some time minister of St. Edmund's, in his native city, he turned puritan, and went to New England; but in 1651 he came back to his native city, and obtained the rectory of St. George's, from which he was ejected in 1662. He then preached privately among the dissenters, and died in 1673. Mr. Allen published "A Chain of Scripture Chronology, 4to. 1639. — Calamy.

Alleon (Dulac John Lewis), a French naturalist, was born at Lyons, where he practised some time at the bar, but afterwards retired from that profession to St. Etienne, in Forez, in order to pursue his favourite studies, and died there in 1768. His works are — 1. Memoires pour servir a l'Histoire Naturelle de Lyonnois, Forez, et Beaujolais, 2 vols. 12mo. 2. Melanges d'Histoire Naturelle, 1763, 2 vols. 12mo. A second edition of this last was extended to 6 volumes. — Dict. Hist.

Allestry or Allestree (Richard), a divine, was born at Uppington, in Shropshire, in 1619. He became student of Christ-church, Oxford, and in 1641, took arms in the royal cause: but after serving some time in a military capacity, he returned to the university; from which he was again obliged to retire when the city was taken by the parliamentary forces. On the ruin of the king's affairs, he entered into orders, and became chaplain to lord Newport; but after the fatal battle of Worcester, he was employed as an agent between the exiled monarch and his friends in England. In this dangerous service he encountered many hardships, and in 1659, was seized at Dover, but had the luck to secure his papers. At the Restoration he took his doctor's degree, was appointed regius professor of divinity at Oxford, and canon of Christ-church. In 1665 he obtained the provostship of Eton, where he died in 1680, and his remains were interred in the chapel of that college. His sermons were published in one volume folio, with his portrait and life prefixed. Jacob Allestry, nephew of the doctor, was educated at Westminster-school, and at Christ-church, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts, became a student, and reader in music. He wrote some verses on the visit of James, duke of York, to Oxford, and died there in 1686. — Biog. Brit.

Alletz (Pons Augustin), a French advocate, was a native of Montpellier, and died at Paris in 1785, aged 82. Having no talents for the bar, he turned author, and published several works, the principal of which are — 1. Tableau de l'Histoire de France, 2 vols. 12mo. 2. Les Princes célèbres qui ont regné dans le monde, 4 vols. 3. Les ornament de la Memoire, 12mo. This is a collection of poetical extracts from the best French writers. 4. Alley (William), an English bishop, was born at Great Wycomb, in Buckinghamshire, and educated first at Eton, and next at King's-college, Cambridge. He afterwards studied at Oxford, and entered into orders; but on the accession of Mary, he practised physic, and kept school. When Elizabeth came to the throne, he was appointed lecturer at St. Paul's, and in 1560, bishop of Exeter. He died in 1570. He published a commentary on the first epistle of St. Peter, and translated the Pentateuch in the Bishops' Bible. His son, Roger Alley, was archdeacon of Cornwall, and his great-grandson, Peter Alley, was for seventy-three years rector of Donamore, near Dublin, where he died in 1763, at the extraordinary age of one hundred and ten years and two months. — *Biog. Alleyn (Edward), founder of Dulwich college, in Surry, was born in London in 1566. He acquired great reputation as an actor, and became proprietor of a playhouse in Moorfields, as well as keeper of the royal bear-garden. Aubrey relates a ridiculous story, that the devil appeared to him when personating the character of Satan, which so frightened him, that he quitted the stage. In 1614 he laid the foundation of his college, which he completed in 1617, and then became the first master. He also endowed it with 800*l.* per annum for the maintenance of one master, and one warden (who must be unmarried, and always of the name of Alleyn, or Allen), and four fellows, of whom three to be clergymen, and the fourth an organist; besides six poor men and six women, with twelve boys, who are to be educated till the age of fourteen or sixteen, when they are to be apprenticed to some trade. This building is called "The College of God's Gift." He died in 1626, and was buried in the chapel of the college. — Biog. Brit.

ALMEIDA (Apollinarius de), a Portuguese Jesuit, who became a missionary in Abyssinia, from which country he was banished; but afterwards ventured to return and was put to death, with two others of his order in 1568. There was another of his name and order, Manoel or Emanuel Almeida, also a native of Portugal, who was sent ambassador to the king of Abyssinia in 1622: but when the Jesuits were expelled, he was obliged to remove to Goa, where he became provincial of his order, and inquisitor. He died in 1646. His works are— 1. A History of Upper Ethiopia, fol. 1666. 2. Historical Letters, written from Abyssinia to the general of the Jesuits at Rome, and published there in 1629. He also left some manuscripts relative to the errors of the Abyssinians. — Univ. Hist.

ALMEIDA (Francis), a Portuguese gentleman, was appointed, in 1505, the first viceroy of India. He took the city of Quiloa, and made many other important conquests. Being informed that a rich Arabian fleet lay in the harbour of Panama, he proceeded thither with his squadron, and found the ships protected by a strong garrison. Almeida, however, landed, and after an obstinate conflict, defeated the enemy; and set the city on fire. While he was thus engaged, Albuquerque received orders from Portugal to supersede him, but Almeida, being about to proceed to Dabul with a fleet, refused to deliver up his government. In this expedition he put all the inhabitants of the city to the sword. He afterwards fell in with the fleet of the enemy, and defeated it; which produced a peace. On his passage to Europe in 1509, Almeida was slain at the Cape of Good Hope, in a skirmish with the natives. — Ibid.

ALMEIDA (Laurence), son of the preceding, was, like his father, an enterprising commander and navigator. He distinguished himself by many expeditions in the Indian seas, and entered into an advantageous treaty with the sovereign of Ceylon, who agreed to pay a yearly tribute of cinnamon to the Portuguese. Almeida lost his life in a severe engagement with the Egyptian fleet, off the harbour of Chaul, in the bay of Cambaya, but in what year is uncertain. — Ibid.

ALMEIDA (Theodore), a Portuguese priest, was born in 1722. He published a celebrated work entitled "Recreaceo Filosophica," 5 vols. 8vo., in which he gave a new turn to the philosophical studies of his countrymen. Having given some offence to his government, he was obliged to seek an asylum in France, where he resided some years. On his return to Portugal, he became a member of the academy of sciences at Lisbon, where he published a trifling romance, entitled "The Happy Independent." He died in 1805. His works amount to forty volumes, besides five of translations. He was a member of the royal society of London. — Biog. Universelle.

ALMELOVEEN (Theodore Janson Van), a Dutch writer and physician, was born at Midrecht near Utrecht, in 1657. His father was a protestant divine, and his mother, a daughter of Janson the printer. He studied first at Utrecht, and then at Goude, where James Tollius presided, and when that learned man removed to Noortwick, Almeloveen followed him. In 1676 he studied under Grævius, and at the same time learned Hebrew of Leusden, with a view to the ministry; but was deterred from that profession by the violence with which theological controversy was then carried on in Holland between the Calvinists and Remonstrants. Accordingly he applied to medicine, and in 1680, maintained a thesis on sleep, and the following year another on asthma, for his doctor's degree. In 1697, he was invited to take the professor's chair in history and Greek, at Harderwick, which offer he accepted: and in 1702, he was also appointed professor of medicine, retaining both offices till his death in 1712. He left to the public library of Utrecht, his collection of the editions of Quinctilian, of which a catalogue has been printed by Masson. Almeloveen published — 1. Hippocratis Aphorismi, Gr. et Lat. 12mo. 2. Aurelii Celsi de Medicina, cum notæ, 12mo. 3. Apicii Cælii de obsoniis et condimentis, sive de Arte coquinaria, cum notis, 8vo. 4. Aurelianis de Morbis acutis et chronicis, 4to. 5. Bibliotheca promissa et latens, i. e. an account of books promised but never published, 8vo. 6. The Anatomy of the Muscle, in Flemish, 8vo. 7. Onomasticon rerum inventarum et inventa nova antiqua, 8vo. 8. Opuscula sive antiquitatum et sacris profanarum specimen conjectans veterum poetarum fragmenta et plagiarorum syllabus, 8vo. 9. Decker de Scriptis adespotis pseudepigraphis, et suppositiis conjecturæ, nov. ed. 12mo. 10. C. Rutilius Numantianus, 12mo. 11. Amœnitates theologico-philologicæ, 8vo. 12. Disputationes quatuor de mensis, lecticis, et poculis veterum, 4to. 13. Fasti Consulares, 8vo. 14. Strabo, 2 vols. folio. This is a beautiful, but not correct edition. 15. De vitis Stephanorum, 8vo. He also assisted Drakestein in his Hortus Malabaricus. — Moreri.

ALMICI (Peter Camille), a priest of the oratory, was born at Brescia in 1714, and died in 1779. He published Critical Reflections on Febronius "De Statu Ecclesiæ;" and he also wrote a curious treatise on the art of Self Biography. — Biog. Universelle.

ALMODOVAR (the duke of), a Spanish ambassador to this court, and several others, who in 1781, published a journal entitled "Decada Epistolen," giving an account of French works. He also translated into Spanish, Raynal's History of the two Indies. He died at Madrid in 1794. — Ibid.

ALMON (John), a political writer, was born at Liverpool in 1738, and educated at Warrington. After serving his apprenticeship to a bookseller, he went to sea, and in 1759, settled in London, where he turned his thoughts to politics. On the death of George the second, he published a review of his reign, which went through two editions. His next piece was a review of the administration of Mr. Pitt, which gained him the patronage of Lord Temple. In 1765, he opened a shop in Piccadilly, but still continued to write party pamphlets during the American war. His success, however, in trade was not adequate to his activity, and he was obliged to give up the bookselling business. He died in 1805. His principal publications, besides those already mentioned, were — 1. Anecdotes of Lord Chatham, 3 vols. 8vo. 2. Biographical Anecdotes of [illegible]. 8vo. 3. ALPHERY (Mikepher or Nicephorus), a Russian prince, who, when that country was torn by civil dissensions, at the end of the 16th century, was sent with two brothers to England, under the care of a Russian merchant, by whom they were placed in the university of Oxford, where the others died of the small-pox. The subject of this article entered into orders, and in 1618 obtained the rectory of Warley, in Huntingdonshire, from whence he was ejected in the civil war, and barbarously treated by the republicans. At the Restoration he was reinstated in his living; but being old and infirm, he committed the care of it to a curate, and retired to Hammersmith, where he died at the age of 80. Mrs. Alphery, the last descendant of this family, married one Johnson a sadler at Huntingdon, and was living in 1764, when she confirmed these facts to the late Lord Sandwich. — Biog. Brit.

Alphesius, a Jewish rabbi, who made an abridgement of the Talmud. He died in 1103. — Buxtorf.

Alphius (Avitus), a Roman poet, who flourished in the 3d century. He wrote the lives of eminent persons, and the history of the Carthaginian war, in verse. — Voss. de Hist. Lat.

Alphonso V. king of Arragon, was born in 1384, and succeeded his father, Ferdinand the Just, in 1416. Soon after his accession, a confederacy was formed against him, which he frustrated, but pardoned the conspirators. He laid claim to the throne of Naples, by an agreement with Joan, queen of that kingdom, that he should be her heir. This embroiled him in a war with several of the Italian states, and he and his fleet were taken by the Genoese. The king was conveyed to Milan, where he made the duke his friend, and was thereby enabled to conquer Naples, in 1442. He died there in 1458, leaving his Neapolitan dominions to his natural son Ferdinand; and those of Spain, Sardinia, and Sicily, to his brother Juan, king of Navarre. The Alphonsine Tables were drawn up under his direction, and at his expense. He also wrote on the motions of the stars, and a history of Spain; but he has been charged with uttering this foolish expression, "that if he had been consulted on the creation of the world, he would have given the Almighty better counsel." Some have supposed that this was merely in reprobation of the Ptolemaic system, then commonly received; but this, it must be confessed, is a poor excuse for an assertion which amounted to profanity, if not blasphemy. — Moreri.

Alphonsus (Peter), a Spanish Jew, who embraced Christianity, and had Alphonsus, king of Arragon, for his godfather, in 1106. He wrote a vindication of the Christian religion, which was printed at Cologne in 1536. — Ibid.

Alpini (Prosper), a physician and botanist, was born in 1553, at Marostica, in the state of Venice. He was at first a soldier, but quitted that profession, and went to Padua, where he made so great a progress in learning, that he became deputy rector and syndic. In 1578, he took his doctor's degree, and in 1580 went to Egypt as physician to the Venetian consul. He resided there three years, in which time he greatly improved himself in botany. He was the first who discovered the sexes and generation of plants. On his return to Venice in 1586, Andrew Doria, prince of Melfi, appointed him his physician, and in 1593, he was called to the botanical professorship at Padua, where he died in 1617. His works are — "De Medicina Ægyptiorum;" "De Plantis Ægyptii;" "Historiæ naturalis Egypti," 2 vols. 4to. "De Balsamo;" "De Præsagienda Vita et Morte Ægrotantium," 4to.: of this work Dr. James published a translation in 2 vols. 8vo. "De Medicina Methodica;" "De Rhapontico, Disputatio in Gymnasio," &c.; "De Plantis Exoticis." A genus of plants of the monogynia order, derives the name of Alpinia from this illustrious observer of nature. — Moreri.

Alsop (Anthony), an English writer, was educated at Westminster school, from whence he was elected to Christ-church, Oxford, where he took the degree of M. A. in 1696, and that of B. D. in 1706. In 1698 he published "Fabularum Æsopicarum Delectus," 8vo. with a preface, in which he took the side of Boyle against Bentley. This book, though now scarcely known, made a great noise at the time of its appearance. Alsop was for many years a distinguished tutor in his college, till bishop Trelawney appointed him his chaplain, and gave him a prebend in his cathedral, with the rectory of Brightwell in Berkshire. In 1717, a verdict being given against him for the breach of a marriage contract, he found it necessary to go abroad; but how long he continued in exile is unknown. He died in 1726. In 1752, his Latin odes were published in a quarto volume by sir Francis Bernard. Four of his English poems are in Dodsley's collection, one in that of Pearch, and some in other miscellanies. — Gen. Biog. Dict.

Alsop (Vincent), a nonconformist divine, was born in Northamptonshire, and educated at St. John's-college, Cambridge. He was for some time usher of the school at Okeham in Rutlandshire, and afterwards minister of Welby in Northamptonshire, from whence he was ejected in 1662 for nonconformity. He next became pastor to a congregation of dissenters in Westminster. He was in some favour with king James II. who pardoned his son after having been convicted of treason. He died in 1703. Mr. Alsop wrote a witty book entitled "Antisozzo," in answer to Dr. Sherlock. — Calamy.

Alstedius (John Henry), a German divine, and professor of philosophy and divinity at Herborn, in the county of Nassau, and afterwards at Waissemburg in Transylvania, where he died in 1638, aged fifty. His Encyclopædia was once much read, and held in esteem even by Roman-catholics; but he appears to greater advantage in his Theologia Polemica. — Moreri.

Alston (Charles), an eminent physician, was born in Scotland in 1683, and educated at Glasgow, from whence he went to Leyden, where he took his doctor's degree under Boerhaave. On his return he settled at Edinburgh, and became lecturer on botany, and the materia medica. He died in 1760. He published "Tirocinium Botanicum Edinburgense," 1753, in which he attacked the system of Linnæus. His "Lectures on the Materia Medica" were published in two vols. 4to. 1770. He also wrote some papers in the "Edinburgh Medical Essays." — Pulteney's Sketches of Botany.

Alstroemer (Jonas), a patriotic Swede, was born of poor parents at Alingsas, in West Gothland, in 1685. After struggling a long time with poverty, he visited London, where he paid particular attention to trade, and in 1723 returned home to carry the plans which he had formed into execution. Having received encouragement from the States, he soon raised his native town to a flourishing condition, which kindled a spirit of emulation that diffused itself over the kingdom. Alstroemer followed up the good work, by collecting information from all parts of Europe respecting manufactures; and at the same time carried on a most extensive mercantile concern at Gottenburgh, where he established a sugar-house, and traded to the Indies and the Levant. Nor was he unmindful of rural economy; for he introduced many useful plants, particularly the potatoe, and such as were necessary in dying. He also improved the woollen trade, by importing sheep from England and Spain. Thus the manufacture of cloth gave employment to many hands, the revenue was increased, and that money saved to Sweden which used to go into foreign countries. For these benefits Alstroemer was honoured with letters of nobility, the order of the polar star, and the title of counsellor of commerce; the academy of sciences chose him a member, and above all, the national states decreed a public statue to be erected to his honour on the exchange of Stockholm. He died in 1761, leaving a large fortune to his four sons, three of whom were men of talents and patriotism. Claude Alstroemer, born in 1736, became a pupil of Linnæus. He travelled over a great part of Europe, in the course of which he sent many valuable plants to his preceptor, and among the rest the seeds of a fine Peruvian plant, to which Linnæus gave the name of the Lily of Alstroemer. One of his papers on the Simia Mammon, is in the memoirs of the academy of Stockholm. He died in 1794. — Biog. Universelle.

Alt (Francis Joseph Nicholas Baron D'), a Swiss writer, was born at Friburg in 1689, and died in 1771. He served in the Austrian army as a captain, but quitted the military profession for the more quiet situation of an avoyer or magistrate in his native place. He wrote "Histoire de la Suisse," 10 vols. 8vo., of which competent judges speak with contempt. — Ibid.

Alter (Francis Charles), a German critic, was born at Englesberg in 1749. He entered the society of the Jesuits, and became Greek teacher in the school of St. Anne, at Vienna, where he died in 1804. Of two hundred and fifty volumes or dissertations which he published, the following are the principal — 1. Novum Testamentum, ad codicem Vindobomensem Græce expressum, 2 vols, 8vo. 2. A German translation of Harwood's view of the classics, 8vo. 3. Various editions of Greek and Latin writers, as Lysias, Cicero, Tuscul. Quæst., Lucretius, Homer, Plato's Dialogues, Thucydides, &c. 4. The Greek Chronicle of George Phranzes, folio. 5. Notes on the Literary Hist[illegible] Georgia, 8vo. [illegible] rous dissertatio[illegible] ferent literar[illegible]

Althami[illegible] divine of [illegible] tury. He [illegible] works, and [illegible] reformed doctrines into the canton of Berne in 1528. His principles, however, rectified strongly to Antinomianism, and he attacked the authenticity of the epistle of St. James with virulence. He died in 1540. By some writers he is called Brentius, from the place of his nativity, a town in Suabia. — Gen. Biog. Dict.

Althusius (John), syndic of Bremen, and professor of law at Herborn in the sixteenth century. He wrote "De Jurisprudentia Romana," and "De Civili Conversatione;" but his principal work is entitled "Politica methodice digesta," 1603; in which he maintained the right of the people to depose and punish their sovereigns. — Gen. Dict.

Alticozzi (Laurence), a learned Jesuit, was born at Cortona in 1689, and died at Rome in 1777. His principal work is "the Sum of St. Augustine," 6 vols. 4to.; in which he gives a curious history of Pelagianism. He also wrote against Beausobre on the subject of Manicheism. — Biog. Universelle.

Altilius (Gabriel), a Latin poet of the fifteenth century, was born in the kingdom of Naples. He became preceptor to prince, afterwards king Ferdinand, which probably occasioned his elevation to the episcopal dignity as bishop of Policastro. He died about the year 1500. Some of his poems are in the Deliciæ Poetarum Italorum, and others are to be found appended to the works of his friend Sannazarius. Though few, they possess great merit. — Gen. Dict. Tiraboschi.

Alting (Henry), a German divine, was born at Emden in 1583. His father Menson Alting, was one of the first who preached the doctrines of the reformation in Groningen, under the tyranny of Alva. He died in 1612. The son was educated at Herborn, and in 1605, became private tutor to three young noblemen, who studied with the electoral prince at Sedan, from whence they all removed to Heidelberg. In 1612, Alting accompanied the young elector to England; when that prince espoused the daughter of James the first. On his return to Heidelberg, he was appointed professor of the common places of divinity, on which occasion he took his doctor's degree. In 1616 he became rector of the Collegium Sapientiæ, and was nominated one of the deputies to the synod of Dordt. In 1622 he very narrowly escaped with his life, when count Tilly took Heidelberg by storm. Having joined his family, he removed to Embden, and in 1627, accepted the divinity professorship at Groningen. He died in 164[illegible]. His works are — 1. Notæ in Decades problematum, J. Henr. de gloria Dei, his v[illegible] 2. Loci Communes, 3 vols. 3. [illegible]gnus Augustanæ Confessionis. 4. Methodus Theologiæ, &c. 5. Explicatio Catecheseos Palatina, 8vo. 6. Historia Ecclesiastica Palatina, 4to. — Moreri.

Alting (Jacob), son of the above, was born at Heidelberg in 1618. Having completed his studies he came to England, and was ordained by Dr. Prideaux, bishop of Worcester. In 1643 he was chosen Hebrew professor at Groningen, and in 1667, professor of divinity, in conjunction with Des Marets, with whom, however, he had so violent a dispute, that the university of Leyden was resorted to for its advice, and the judgment returned was a censure on both parties. Alting died in 1679, and his works were published at Amsterdam in 1687, in 5 vols. folio. — Bayle.

Alting (Menson), a burgomaster of Groningen, who wrote a book, entitled, "Descriptio Germaniæ Inferioris," 1697, folio, and another on the topography and antiquities of Friesland, folio, 1701. He died in 1713, aged 76. — Ibid.

Altissimo, an Italian poet of the fifteenth century, was a native of Florence, and on being laureated, took this lofty name. He was one of the most admired improvisators of his time, but only one of his poems is now extant, entitled, "I Riali di Francia," 1534, 4to. — Biog. Universelle.

Altmann (John George), a Swiss historian and divine, was born in 1697 at Berne; and died in 1758, curate of Inns in the same canton. He was also professor of moral philosophy and Greek at Berne. His works are — 1. Metelemata philologico-critica, quibus difficilioribus N. Test. locis ex antiquitate lux affunditur, 3 vols. 4to. 2. A description of the Glaciers, 8vo. 3. Principia Ethica, 2 vols. 8vo. He also compiled, in conjunction with Breitinger, the collection entitled "Tempe Helvetica," 6 vols. 8vo. — Biog. Universelle.

Altomari (Donato Antonio ab), a physician and professor of medicine at Naples, of which city he was a native, in the sixteenth century. He was a close follower of Galen, and died about 1556. His works were published first at Lyons in 1565, in folio, and subsequently at several other places. — Haller, Bibl. Med.

Altdorfer (Albert), an eminent artist, was born in 1488 at Altdorf, in Bavaria. He rose by his merit to be a senator of Ratisbon, and architect of the city, where he died in 1578. He had great merit as a painter, but more as an engraver; and his works in metal and wood are very valuable. It is no small proof of his merit that he was closely imitated by Holbein. — Pilkington's Painters, and Strutt's Engravers.

Alunno (Francis), an Italian writer, was a native of Ferrara in the fifteenth century. He wrote — 1. Observations on Petrarch, 8vo. 2. Le Richesse della Lingua Volgare, folio. 3. Della Fabrica del Mondo, ten books. He wrote an exceeding small hand, and presented the emperor Charles V., with the Creed and the first chapter of St. John, written in the compass of a farthing, so that the emperor was a whole day deciphering the manuscript. — Gen. Biog. Dict.

Alured of Beverley, an old English historian, was canon and treasurer of the church of St. John in Beverley, and died about the year 1128. He wrote a chronicle of the English kings, which was published by Hearne in 1716. — Biog. Brit.

Alva (Ferdinand Alvarez, duke of), was descended from one of the most ancient families in Spain, and born in 1508. He made his first campaign at the battle of Pavia; and was in great favour with Charles V., who made him a general, but though distinguished by high military talents, he was equally noted for his cruelty. At the siege of Metz he performed prodigies of valour; but the place was so well defended, that the emperor was obliged to raise the siege. In the campaign against the pepe, Alva was completely successful, and obliged the pontiff to sue for peace, after which he repaired to Rome, fell on his knees before his holiness, and solicited forgiveness. Thus it appears that superstition was as prominent a part of his character as cruelty. In 1567 Philip II. sent him to reduce the Low Countries, then in a state of revolt. Here he established a council called the bloody tribunal, and filled the United Provinces with scenes of terror, for which his memory is still held there in detestation. After obtaining great advantages over the malcontents, the tide of success turned in their favour so rapidly, that Alva quitted the government. He was afterwards employed against Portugal, where he added to his military renown, by driving don Antonio from the throne in 1581. He died the year following, aged 74. — Robertson's Charles V. Univ. Hist.

Alvarez (Diego), a Spanish Dominican, was born at Rio Seco in Old Castile. He became professor of theology at Rome, and afterwards archbishop of Trani, in the kingdom of Naples. He died in 1635, after publishing several treatises against the Molinists on the doctrine of Grace, and a Commentary on Isaiah, folio. — Moreri.

Alvarez (Emanuel), a Portuguese jesuit, was born at Madeira in 1526. He wrote a Latin grammar of great merit, and died at the college of Evora, of which he was rector, in 1582. — Ibid.

Alvarez (Francis), a Portuguese divine, who was sent as ambassador by Emanuel king of Portugal, to David king of Abyssinia. He continued six years in that country, and at his return gave an account of his mission to pope Clement VII., in the presence of the emperor Charles V. He died in 1540, leaving behind him in Portuguese, an account of his Embassy, and a description of the Ethiopian manners and customs, of which a French translation was printed at Antwerp in 1558. — Moreri.

Alvarez de Oriente (Ferdinand), a Portuguese poet, was born at Goa in the fifteenth century. He served in the navy, and rose to the rank of captain, in the fleet commanded by admiral Tellez in India. His chief work is entitled "Lusitania Transformada," which was printed at Lisbon in 1607, 8vo. He was also the author of the fifth and sixth parts of the romance of Palmerin of England. — Ibid.

Alvarotto (James), professor of law at Padua in the 15th century. He wrote "Commentaria in Libros Feudorum," Frankfort, 1537, folio. He died in 1542, aged 68. There were several other famous men of this family. — Moreri.

Alvensleben (Philip Charles, Count de), a Prussian statesman, was born in 1745 at Hanover, where his father was counsellor of war. The son was brought up at Magdeburg with the prince royal, afterwards Frederic William II. He next studied at Halle, and in 1775 was sent on an embassy to the elector of Saxony, after which he was employed on various other missions, and in 1789 came to England, but was recalled the following year, and appointed minister for foreign affairs. During his administration he founded several benevolent establishments, and gave general satisfaction. He died in 1802. The count wrote "Essai d'un tableau chronologique des evenemens de la guerre, depuis la paix de Munster, jusqu'a celle de Hubertsbourg," 8vo. 1792. — Biog. Universelle.

Alxinger (John Baptist D'), a German poet, was born at Vienna in 1755. His father was a civilian, and counsellor of the consistory to the bishop of Passau. The son also studied the law, but on the death of his parents he relinquished that profession, and applied to poetry. In 1784, he published a collection of poems which gained him great reputation; but his principal pieces were "Doolin of Mentz, and Bliomberis," in imitation of Wieland. He died in 1797. — Univ. Hist.

Alypius, a Platonic philosopher of Alexandria in the 5th century. He was very diminutive in stature, but of a strong mind, and one of the best dialecticians of his time. — Bayle.

Alypius, an architect of Antioch, who was employed by Julian, in his attempt to rebuild the temple of Jerusalem. At the close of life he was banished, on a charge of magical practices. His geographical description of the world was printed at Geneva in 1628. — Ibid.

Alypius, bishop of Tagasta in Africa, was the friend of St. Augustine, and baptized with him at Milan in 388. He opposed the Donatists and Pelagians with great zeal, and died in 430. — Du Pin.

Amaia (Francis), a Spanish lawyer of great reputation, and professor in that faculty at Salamanca, but afterwards a counsellor at Valladolid, where he died about 1640. He wrote "Observationes Juris," 1626, and "Commentaria in posteriores libros Codicis Justiniani," 1635. — Gen. Dict.

Amak, or Abulnagie al Bokhari, a Persian poet in the fifth century. He was entertained at the court of the Sultan Khedar Khan, who instituted an academy of poets, of which he made Amak president. He lived to a great age. His chief poem is the "History of the Loves of Joseph and Zoleiskah." — D'Herbelot.

Amalarius Fortunatus, archbishop of Treves in the year 810. He established Christianity in Saxony, consecrated a church at Hamburgh, and in 813 was sent ambassador to Constantinople by Charlemagne. He died the year following. His Treatise on Baptism is printed among the works of Alcuinus. — Moreri.

Cameron (John), a celebrated divine, was born at Glasgow about the year 1580. He studied at the university of his native place, and after reading lectures on Greek, went to France, where the protestant ministers appointed him master of their new college at Bergerac; from whence he removed to the philosophical professorship at Sedan, and remained there two years. He then went to Paris, and next to Bourdeaux, where he was appointed one of the ministers, and officiated with such reputation, as to be called to the theological chair in the university of Saumur. Here he remained till 1620, when the civil war obliged him to visit England, where he was well received by king James, who appointed him professor of divinity at Glasgow. But this situation not proving agreeable, he went back to Saumur in less than a year, and afterwards to Montauban, where he died of a wound which he received from a furious zealot, in 1625. His works are— 1. Theological Lectures, 3 vols. 4to.; and also in folio. 2. Myrothecium Evangelicum, 4to. Cameron adopted a more enlarged mode of explaining the doctrine of grace than that of Calvin, which naturally raised him many enemies. He was, however, followed by Amyraut. — Bayle. Mosheim.

Camoens (Luis de), a Portuguese poet, was born at Lisbon about the year 1524. He was educated at Coimbra, after which he removed to Lisbon, where he fell in love with a lady belonging to the court, on which account he was banished to Santarem. He then accompanied king John III. in his expedition to Africa, and on his return found that his mistress was dead. Being much depressed by this loss he sailed to India, where he contributed to the success of an expedition against the Pimenta isles, and in 1555 went with Manuel de Vasconcelos to the Red Sea. While in the East he gave some offence to the government of Goa, in consequence of which he was banished to Macao. After an absence of sixteen years he returned to his native country; when, to crown his misfortunes, he suffered shipwreck, losing all his property except his manuscript of the Lusiad, which he held with his left hand while he swam with his right. This poem was published at Lisbon in 1572; but notwithstanding its extraordinary merit, the author was neglected, and compelled to subsist upon the alms which his Javanese slave, Antonio, procured by begging daily in the streets. At length Camoens, reduced to the extremity of wretchedness, died in an alms-house in 1579, and was buried in the church of St. Anne of the Franciscans. He wrote a number of beautiful pieces, some of which have been translated into English by lord Strangford; but the fame of Camoens rests upon his Lusiad, founded on the discovery of India by Vasco di Gama. There are two English versions, one by Fanshaw, and the other by Mickle, of which the last is the best. — Life, by Lord Strangford.

Campanella (Thomas), an Italian philosopher, was born at Stilo, in Calabria, in 1568. He entered into the order of Dominicans, and at the age of twenty-two formed a new system of philosophy, which made a great noise, and raised him many enemies among the zealots for the doctrines of Aristotle. The persecution he met with at Naples induced him to go to Rome, from whence he proceeded to Florence, and next to Padua. In 1598 he returned to Calabria, where, shortly afterwards, he was seized and carried to Naples as an enemy to the state, put seven times to the rack, and finally condemned to perpetual imprisonment. While in confinement he wrote some philosophical pieces, which Adamus caused to be published in Germany. After remaining in prison twenty-seven years he was sent to Rome, at the intercession of pope Urban VIII.; but in 1634, being fearful of some fresh designs against him, he removed to France, where he died in 1639. His principal works are— 1. Prodromus Philosophiæ Instaurandæ, 4to. 2. Atheismus Triumphatus. 3. De Gentilismo non retinendo, 4to. 4. Astrologia, 4to. 5. Philosophia Rationalis. 6. Civitas Solis, 12mo. 7. Universalis Philosophia. 8. De recta ratione studendi, 8vo. 9. De sensu rerum et magia, 4to. 10. De reformatione scientiarum, 4to. 11. De Monarchia Hispanica, 4to. This has been translated into English. — Moreri.

Campano, or Campanus (John Antony), an Italian poet and prelate, was born in 1427, at Cavelli, in Campania, of an obscure family. His original occupation was that of a shepherd; in which situation he was noticed by a priest, who sent him to Naples, where he studied under Laurentius Valla. He afterwards went to Perugia, and rose to the professorship of eloquence. Pope Pius II.; on passing through that city, took him under his patronage, and made him bishop, first of Crotona, and next of Terrano. Paul IV. sent him to the congress of Ratisbon. Sixtus IV., who had been one of his pupils, made him successively governor of Todi, Foligno, and Citta di Castello; but Campano happening to give some offence to his holiness, by opposing his arbitrary measures, was deprived of his place, on which he retired to his bishopric of Terrano, and died there in 1477. He wrote the Life of Pius II., and originally a barber, but discovering a strong genius for blazoning arms, he became a herald painter. In 1764 he was appointed Mowbray herald extraordinary; and he was also a member of the society of antiquaries. He died in 1786. His works are — 1. Historical account of the Greville Family, 8vo. 2. A companion to the Peerage, 8vo. 3. A body of Heraldry, 2 vols. fol. 4. Baronagium Genealogicum, or the pedigrees of English Peers, 6 vols. fol. — Noble's Hist. of the Coll. of Arms.

Edward VI. king of England, was the son of Henry VIII. by lady Jane Seymour, and born in 1538. He imbibed a zeal for the reformation from his maternal uncle, the great duke of Somerset, and he furthered the Protestant religion with firmness during his reign; which, however, was unfortunately too short for the hopes of the nation. He died of a consumption at Greenwich, July 6. 1553. Edward is entitled to a place here, on account of his private virtues and extraordinary talents, for he wrote — 1. The Sum of a conference with the Lord Admiral, which is extant in his own hand. 2. A Method for the proceedings of the Council. 3. King Edward's arguments against the Pope's supremacy. This has been printed; as also has his diary in Bishop Burnet's History of the Reformation. — Hist. of England.

Edwards (Bryan), an historian, was born in 1743, at Westbury in Wiltshire. He was brought up by his maternal uncle, a planter in Jamaica, to whose property he succeeded, as he also did to that of Mr. Hume, another merchant of the same island. In 1796 he was elected into parliament for Grampound, which place he represented till his death, July 15. 1800. His works are — 1. Thoughts on the trade of the West India Islands, 8vo. 2. A Speech on the Slave Trade. 3. History of the British Colonies in the West Indies, 2 vols. 4to. and 3 vols. 8vo. 4. The Proceedings of the governor and assembly of Jamaica in regard to the Maroon Negroes, 8vo. — Biog.

Edwards (Edward), an artist, was born in London in 1738. He was brought up to his father's business of a chair-maker and carver; but quitted it for drawing, in which he acquired skill enough to become a teacher, and by that means he supported his mother when a widow, and also his brother and sister. He obtained two premiums from the society of arts for historical pictures, and in 1773 became an associate of the royal academy. After this he visited Italy, and on his return was employed by several gentlemen, particularly Horace Walpole and Mr. Hamilton of Bath. In 1788 he was appointed teacher of perspective in the Royal Academy. He died in 1806. Mr. Edwards published a "Treatise on Perspective," 4to. And after his death were printed his "Anecdotes of Painters," 4to. with his own life prefixed.

Edwards (George), a naturalist, was born in 1698 in the parish of West Ham, Essex. After going through a common school, he was apprenticed to a tradesman in London, but happening to meet with some books of natural history, he resolved to travel for improvement in that line. With this view he went to Holland, next to Norway, and afterwards to France. In 1733 he was chosen librarian of the college of physicians, and he was also elected a fellow of the royal society, to whose transactions he was a contributor. In 1743 he published the first volume of "The History of Birds," and to the fourth volume, which appeared in 1751, he prefixed an extraordinary dedication to the Supreme Being. Three volumes more were added to this valuable work, under the title of Gleanings. In 1770 he collected his miscellaneous papers and essays into one volume octavo. He died at Plaistow, in Essex, in 1773. — Biog. Brit.

Edwards (Jonathan), a divine, was born at Wrexham in Denbighshire in 1629. He was a servitor of Christ-church, Oxford, and afterwards fellow of Jesus'-college, of which he became principal, and also treasurer of Landaff in 1687. He died in 1712. Dr. Edwards published "A Preservative against Socinianism," 4to. — Wood.

Edwards (Jonathan), an American divine, was born at Windsor, in Connecticut, in 1703, and educated at Yale college, where he took his degrees in arts. In 1722 he became preacher to a presbyterian congregation at New York; but in 1724 he was chosen tutor of Yale college. In 1726 he resigned that station, and became assistant to his maternal grandfather, a minister at Northampton in Connecticut. There he continued till 1750, when he was dismissed for refusing to administer the sacrament to immoral persons. He now went on a mission to the Indians, and in 1757 was chosen president of the college of New Jersey, where he died, in March, of the small-pox. He wrote — 1. A Treatise concerning religious Affections, 8vo. 2. The Life of David Brainerd, 8vo. 3. An Inquiry into the qualifications for communion, 8vo. 4. An Enquiry into the Modern Notion of that Freedom of will, which is supposed to be essential to moral agency, 8vo. 5. The Doctrine of original sin defended. 6. A history of Redemption, 8vo. After his death appeared his sermons, with his life prefixed.

Edwards (Richard), an English writer, was born in Somersetshire, in 1523, and educated at Corpus Christi, Oxford, where he obtained a fellowship, but afterwards became a student of Christ-church, and took there his master's degree. Queen Elizabeth made him gentleman of her chapel, and teacher of the children there. He died in 1566. He wrote — 1. "Damon and Pythias," a comedy, acted at court, printed in 1570. 2. "Palemon and Arcyte," another comedy acted at Christ-church before Queen Elizabeth. In the British Museum are some of his sonnets, in manuscript; and several of his poems are in "the Paradise of Dainty Devises." 1578, 4to. — Wood. Warton.

EDWARDS (Thomas), an English divine, was educated at Trinity-college, Cambridge, where he took his degree of M. A. in 1609. He was a presbyterian, and in the civil war wrote with equal zeal against the episcopalians and independents. When the latter gained the ascendancy, he withdrew to Holland, where he died in 1647. His Gangræna, in 3 parts, 4to. exhibits a curious picture of the religious divisions of that period. — Biog. Brit.

EDWARDS (John), son of the preceding, was born at Hertford in 1637. He received his education at Merchant Taylors' school, London; from whence he went to St. John's college, Cambridge, where he was chosen fellow. After the restoration he was ordained and became minister of Trinity-church, Cambridge. He was next chosen lecturer of St. Edmundsbury, and soon after gave up his fellowship. From Cambridge he removed to the living of St. Peter's, Colchester, but after continuing there three years, returned and took his doctor's degree. He died in 1716. Dr. Edwards was a zealous Calvinist and a most voluminous writer. The principal of his numerous works, is one entitled "The Preacher," in 3 vols. 8vo. — Ibid.

EDWARDS (Thomas), a miscellaneous writer, was born, in 1699, at or near London. At a proper age he was entered of Lincoln's Inn, and in due course called to the bar, which, however, he did not follow on account of an impediment in his speech. From his zeal for Shakspeare, he attacked Warburton's edition of his favourite author, which drew a severe retort, and Edwards re-united in his "Canons of Criticism, with a Glossary," of which there were seven editions. To the last he added fifty sonnets in the manner of Spenser, and an account of the trial of the latter. He died in 1757. In 1761 appeared his tract on the doctrine of predestination. — Ibid.

EDWARDS (Thomas), a divine, was born at Coventry in 1729, and educated at Clare-hall, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowship. In 1755 he published a translation of the Psalms, reduced to metre, on the plan of bishop Hare. In 1758 he was appointed master of the school at Coventry, and rector of St. John the Baptist, in that city. The year following he published a book against the doctrine of Irresistible Grace. In 1762 he attacked Dr. Lowth's "Metricæ Harianæ," in a Latin dissertation; to which Lowth replied in a note; and Edwards rejoined in a Latin epistle, which called forth a more elaborate answer. In 1766 our author took his doctor's degree, after which he published "Two dissertations on Bigotry and Persecution." His next publication was in Latin, being two dissertations; the first concerning various readings in the Scripture text, and the second on St. Paul's doctrine of Predestination." 8vo. In 1770 he was presented to the living of Nuneaton in Warwickshire; and in 1779 he resigned the school and the rectory of St. John's. He died at Nuneaton in 1785. Besides the above works he published, "Selecta quædam Theocriti Idyllia," and some sermons. — Biog. Brit.

EDWARDS (William), an architect, was born in Glamorganshire in 1719. He was bred a mason, and on being employed to build a mill, discovered the principles of the arch. In 1746 he undertook a new bridge over the Taaff, which he executed in a superior style; but this being afterwards carried away by some floods, he constructed another of one arch, which exceeds the Rialto at Venice. Having succeeded so well, he was employed in several others of a similar description, throughout the principality; besides which he erected forges, and built many good houses. To these concerns he added the business of a farmer, and on Sundays he exercised the calling of a preacher to a congregation of dissenters. He died in 1789. — Malkin's South Wales.

EECKHOUT (Anthony vander), a painter, was born at Brussels in 1656. He settled at Lisbon, where he was murdered in 1695. He painted fruit and flowers in a fine taste. — Pilkington.

EECKHOUT (Gerbrant vander), an eminent painter, was born at Amsterdam in 1621. He was a disciple of Rembrandt, whose manner he imitated, and excelled him in expression. He died in 1674. — Ibid.

EGEDE (John), a Danish divine, was born in 1686. He went to Greenland to convert the inhabitants in 1721, and resided there fifteen years. He died near Copenhagen in 1758. Egede wrote a description of Greenland, and an account of his mission. His son, Paul Egede, became ... the father, and afterwards bishop of Greenland. He published a new edition of his father's book, and a journal of his own mission. He died in 1789. — Dict. Hist.

EGERTON (Thomas), lord chancellor of England in the reign of James I. He was the natural son of sir Richard Egerton of Ridley, in Cheshire, and was born about 1540. He received his education at Brazennose college, Oxford, from whence he removed to Lincoln's-inn. In 1581 he was made solicitor-general, and in 1592, attorney-general when he received the honour of knighthood, soon after which he was appointed master of the rolls, and in 1596 lord-keeper. In 1603 he was made baron Ellesmere, and lord chancellor. In 1616 he was created viscount Brackley, and died the year following. He wrote Privileges and Prerogatives of the High Court of Chancery; also Observations concerning the office of Lord Chancellor. — Biog. Brit.

Egerton (John), bishop of Durham, was the son of Henry, bishop of Hereford, and born in London in 1721. He received his education at Eton, and next at Oriel-college, Oxford. In 1745 he obtained the rectory of Ross, and the year following a prebend in the cathedral of Hereford. He was appointed chaplain to the king in 1749, and the next year dean of Hereford. In 1756 he was consecrated bishop of Bangor; removed to Lichfield in 1768, and finally to Durham in 1771. He was a munificent prelate, and died in London in 1787. The bishop published only three sermons. — Hutchinson's Durham.

Egerton (Francis), third duke of Bridgewater, was born in 1736, being the fifth son of the first duke. He succeeded his brother in 1748, and distinguished himself by the plans, which he carried into effect, for the improvement of his estates in Lancashire and Cheshire. After immense expense and much opposition, he had the satisfaction of opening his first great canal in 1760; and in four years more he extended the navigation to the Mersey. He died unmarried in 1803. — British Peerage.

Eggeling (John Henry), a learned antiquary, was born in 1639, at Bremen, of which place he became secretary. He died in 1718. His principal works are — 1. De numismatibus quibusdam abstrusis Neronis, 4to. 2. Mysteria Cæsaris et Bacchi in vasculo ex uno Onyche, 4to. 3. De orbe stagneo Antinoi. 4. De Miscellaneis Germaniæ antiquitatibus exercitationes. — Moreri.

Eggesfield (Robert), the founder of Queen's-college, Oxford, was a native of Cumberland, where his family held large estates; part of which now belongs to the college. He was probably born at Eggleshield, and in 1332 became rector of Burgh in Westmoreland, but he lived at court, where he was chaplain to Philippa, queen of Edward III. He died in 1349. — Hutchinson's Cumberland.

Eginhard, a German historian, and secretary to Charlemagne, who gave him his daughter Imma in marriage. He afterwards embraced a religious life, and became superintendant of several monasteries. He died in 840. Eginhard wrote the life of Charlemagne in elegant Latin; also the Annals of France from 741 to 829. — Moreri.

Egmont (Justus van), a painter, was born at Leyden in 1602. He became painter to the king of France, and one of the directors of the academy of painting at Paris. He died in 1674. — D'Argenville.

Egmont (Lamoral, count), a Flemish nobleman, was born in 1522. He served in the armies of Charles V. and was general of the horse at the battle of St. Quintin, and also at that of Gravelines. After the departure of Philip II. for Spain, he took part in the troubles of the Low Countries; for which the duke of Alva caused him to be beheaded at Brussels in 1568. — Moreri.

Egnazio (Batista), an Italian scholar, was born at Venice in 1473. He was a disciple of Politian, and became so eminent as a teacher as to be honoured with the right of citizenship, with an exemption from all taxes. He also obtained ecclesiastical preferment, and was elected professor of eloquence at Venice, where he died in 1553. His works are — 1. De Romanis principibus vel Cæsaribus, 1519. 2. De exemplis virorum illustrium, 4to. 1554. — Ibid.

Ehret (George Dionysius), a botanical painter, was the son of a gardener at Durlach, and born in 1710. He discovered an early genius for painting flowers, and some of his drawings being purchased by Dr. Trew of Nuremberg, Ehret was enabled to visit France, where he was employed in the royal garden under Jussieu. He next came to London, but in 1736 went to Holland where he was engaged in the garden of Mr. Clifford, and delineated the figures of plants in the "Hortus Cliffortianus." About 1740 he returned to England, and was patronized by several persons of distinction. He became a member of the royal society in 1757, and died in 1770. — Pulteney's Sketches.

Eisenmenger (John Andrew), a German writer, was born at Manheim in 1654, and educated at Heidelberg, after which he travelled into Holland and England. He became professor of oriental languages at Heidelberg, where he died in 1704. His works are chiefly directed against the Jews, in a confutation of their traditions and talmudical doctrines, and were published in 2 vol. 4to. 1711. — Moreri.

Elsholtzius (John Caspar), a physician, was born at Strasburg in 1630 and died in 1719. He wrote a Treatise on the Weights and Measures of various Countries, and on the Coins of the Ancients, 8vo, and another on the Figure of the Earth, 8vo. — Ibid.

Elsyng (Jeffery), an English divine, was a native of Cheshire, and educated at Eton and King's-college, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts, and obtained a fellowship. He became rector of Sedgefield, afterwards of Morpeth, and lastly dean of Carlisle. He died in 1791. Dr. Ekins was the author of a poem on the nuptials of George III. and queen Charlotte, inserted in the Cambridge verses on that occasion. He also translated from the Greek of Apollonius Rhodius "The Loves of Medea and Jason," 4to. 1771. — Gent. Mag.

Elias (Levita), a German rabbi, who, in the sixteenth century went to Rome and Venice, where he taught Hebrew with reputation. His works are — 1. Lexicon Chaldaicum, fol. 1541. 2. Traditio Doctrinæ, 4to. 3. Collectio locorum in quibus Chaldæus paraphrastes interjecit nomen Messiæ Christi, 1572, 8vo. 4. Several Hebrew Grammars. 5. Nomenclatura Hebraica, 4to. He rejected the antiquity of the Hebrew vowel-points, which brought upon him the enmity of his brethren. —Moreri.

Elias (Matthew), a painter, was born near Cassel, in 1658, of parents who were extremely poor. His genius being discovered by Corbéen, a landscape and historical painter of Dunkirk, he took him under his patronage, and sent him to school, where he learnt the languages; after which he was instructed in painting. Elias went next to Paris, where he became professor of painting in the academy of St. Luke, and executed a great number of very fine pictures, chiefly on sacred subjects for churches. He died at Dunkirk in 1741. — Descamps.

Elichman (John), a native of Silesia, who became a physician at Leyden, where he died in 1639. He understood sixteen languages, and wrote a letter in Arabic, "De usu Linguæ Arabicæ in Medicina," 1636. He also published a Dissertation, "De termino vitæ secundum mentem orientalium," 1639. His Latin translation of the Tablature of Cebes appeared with the Arabic version and the Greek, at Leyden, in 1640. — Moreri.

Eliot (John), called the Apostle of the Indians, was born in Devonshire or Cornwall about 1604. He was educated at Cambridge; after which he became an assistant at a school, but being dismissed on account of his non-conformity, he went to New England, where he was chosen pastor of an independent congregation. In 1646 he began to study the Indian language, that he might be enabled to preach to the native tribes of America. In this he had such success, that he undertook a translation of the Bible into the Mohawk tongue. He wrote several books, as an Indian Grammar, etc. a Primer for the Indians, 12mo. &c. He died in 1689. — Life by Mather.

Elliot (George Augustus, lord Heathfield), was the son of sir Gilbert Elliot, of Stobbs, in Roxburghshire, and born about 1718. He was educated at Leyden, after which he entered into the Prussian service. He returned to Scotland in 1735 and became a volunteer in the 23d regiment of foot; but in 1736 he went into the corps of engineers. His next removal was to the 2d troop of horse-grenadiers as adjutant; in which situation he distinguished himself at Dettingen, where he was wounded. In this regiment he rose to the rank of lieutenant-colonel; but in 1759 he was appointed to raise the 1st regiment of light horse, which was called by his name. On his return from Germany he was sent to the Havannah, and at the peace, the king conferred on his regiment the title of "royals." In 1775 he was appointed commander-in-chief in Ireland, from whence he soon returned, and was made governor of Gibraltar, which fortress he defended against the combined forces of France and Spain, in a manner that astonished all Europe. On his return to England he was made knight of the bath, and created lord Heathfield, baron Gibraltar. He died at Aix-la-Chapelle, July 6. 1790, leaving a son, Francis Augustus Eliott, who succeeded to the title. — British Peerage.

Elizabeth, queen of England, was the daughter of Henry VIII. by Anne Boleyn, and born in 1533. She was educated in the protestant religion, and by the last will of her father was nominated third in the succession. During the reign of Mary she was treated with great severity, committed to the Tower, and next sent to Woodstock, where she was kept in close custody. Attempts were also made to draw her into a snare on the subject of religion, so as to prosecute her for heresy; but by uncommon prudence she escaped these designs upon her life; and in 1558 succeeded to the throne. The particulars of her reign belong to general history, and an abstract of them would exceed our limits. She gloried in the title of a virgin queen, and refused several matrimonial overtures; yet was supposed to be pleased with these applications. By the vigilance of her government she preserved her dominions in peace, repelled the attempts of the Spaniards, and was considered as the patroness of the reformed churches. She was skilled in the Greek, and spoke the Latin language with fluency. She translated from the former a dialogue of Xenophon, two orations of Isocrates, and a play of Euripides; besides which she wrote a comment on the works of Plato. From the Latin she translated Boethius's Consolations of Philosophy, Sallust's Jugurthine War, and part of Horace's Art of Poetry. She died after a long and glorious reign, March 24. 1603. — Birch's Hist. of Elizabeth, &c.

Ellen (John Theodore, de Brockhusen), a physician, was born at Plotzke in Anhalt in 1689. He studied at Leyden under Boerhaave, and in 1721 was appointed physician to the prince of Anhalt; but afterwards he entered into the service of Frederic I. king of Prussia, who made him counsellor of the court, physician to the army, and dean of the faculty of medicine. Frederic II. appointed him a privy-counsellor in 1755, and the same year he was nominated director of the academy called, "Curieux de la Nature." He died in 1759. After his death was published his work, entitled "Observationes de cognoscendis et curandis morbis præsertim acutis," 8vo. He also wrote many papers in the Transactions of the academy of Berlin. — Dict. Hist.

Elliger (Ottomar), an artist, was born at Gottenburg in 1633. He was intended for a learned profession, but on discovering a turn for drawing, was placed in the school of Daniel Segers, at Antwerp, where
